

Excess Of Apartments Isn't Expected To Last

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

There are still a few "bargains" to be found in Lincoln's apartment market, but you'd better hurry.

Would-be apartment dwellers who are willing to pay $125 a month or more have been able to shop around for the best deal in living quarters. Unlike the house-to-rent market which remains very tight, there has been an oversupply of multi-unit dwellings.

Indications are the sale is just about over. For the past two or three years, the local apartment market has been flooded, with new projects springing up in outlying areas.

There have been a few giveaways, though apparently not many.

Local Move Paid For

At least one larger complex, Candletree Apartments at 40th St. and Highway 2, offers new tenants a free local move if they sign a one-year lease. If the tenant prefers to move himself, the moving cost will be deducted from the rent.

Candletree will also give a free month's rent to any tenant who can entice someone else to move into the complex.

Charleston Court and Chateau La Fleur complexes at 1025 N. 63rd St. encourage renters to resign their leases. If they do, their next month's rent drops to only $50.

In Omaha, where the vacancy rates are sometimes 15 to 20%, complexes have offered new tenants anything from a free month's rent to free luggage.

Lincoln's market seems to be much healthier for apartment developers.

A late-July survey of 4,174 apartments indicates that about 8% of the units built in Lincoln since 1965 are unoccupied.

John Layman of National Bank of Commerce and O. D. Johnson of State Federal Savings and Loan Association interviewed managers of apartment complexes with three or more living units.

Vary By Area, Type

Results indicate the number of vacant apartments varies considerably from area to area and with the type of apartment.

When the survey was taken, the vacancy rate was about 17% for three-bedroom apartments, 8.5% for two-bedroom and 7% for one-bedroom units.

About 10% of the apartments in the southeast and central areas of the city were empty. The southeast was defined as the area east of 27th St. and south of O St. The central section was bounded by O, South, 10th and 27th Sts.

The "Central" area east of 27th St. and north of O St. had the lowest vacancy ratio — 4.65%.

"Our survey indicates it is still pretty much a renter's market," Layman said.

"The tenant today can shop around and find the best product for what he's willing to pay."

The hitch is, apartment construction is slowing to a crawl.

To Grow Tighter

Unless the tight money situation eases, the apartment market will keep getting tighter and tighter.

Nancy Perry, building consultant for the City Housing Administrator's Office, said lending institutions keep a close watch on apartment occupancy rates.

"Loan companies won't grant loans if there's any indication builders will overbuild," she said.

In 1971 and 1972 builders "went wild," she said. In those two years, the number of apartment units in Lincoln jumped a whopping 3,558. Last year, the market evened off a little, with 843 new units built.

High interest rates have drastically cut the number of new apartments under construction here by making financing almost impossible to obtain.

Even where money is available, construction costs threaten to be so high that new apartment projects will have a tough time competing rent-wise with older units, Layman said.

Between January and July of this year, building permits were issued for only 364 new apartments. That's down 48% from the same period in 1973, when 705 units were on the drawing boards.

No Immediate Shortage

Layman said the slowdown in apartment construction should not mean a shortage of units, at least in the near future.

But there is the imminent prospect of higher rents.

As buildings fill up, developers can hike rents to offset increased costs, Layman said.

Last year, when Lincoln's vacancy rate in newer apartments was close to 12.5%, there was a risk that hiking rents would chase tenants away.

Protests Thick

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's consideration of pardons for all Watergate figures drew a barrage of protests Tuesday from Congress, with one Senate leader declaring that such a step would "complete the cover-up of the cover-up."

Ford's proud rapport with his former colleagues already had been strained with his pardon Sunday of former President Richard M. Nixon. An aide's announcement Tuesday that he was pondering similar action for all others tied to the scandal drew a new — and even more negative — shock wave.

The surprise disclosure, heightening the controversy touched off by Ford's pardon for Richard Nixon, was made by Acting Press Secretary John Hushen, who said he spoke with Ford's express authorization.

"The question of pardons is under study," he said, adding that the review embraces all 48 individuals who have been accused of crimes associated with the Watergate label. Of the 48, 39 have pleaded guilty or been convicted by juries.

"I can give you no further guidance," Hushen said.

White House counsel Philip Buchen later told reporters he understood Ford was personally conducting the pardon study at this point but that he, Buchen, expected to be involved later.

Reaction from powerful congressional Democrats was swift and critical. Senate Democratic whip Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said new pardons "would complete the cover-up of the cover-up." House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., said they "would be viewed as an abuse of presidential power."

Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., Senate Watergate committee chairman, said it would be a mockery to pardon "these men who undertook to steal from the American people their right to a free election."

At the special Watergate prosecutor's office, spokesman James Doyle said, "I don't think I'm surprised" that Ford would consider the pardons.

Attorneys for six defendants, in the Watergate cover-up trial conferred all morning on a joint strategy.

House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona said he supports Ford's pardon of Nixon but "it does not necessarily follow that a similar pardon should be issued to those individuals under the former president who participated in criminal activity."

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., expressed the hope that Ford "would declare at least a 30-day moratorium on any further pardons over Watergate."

"The tidal wave of national criticism over his pardon of Mr. Nixon should have shown the President that his instincts are clearly out of touch with the vast majority of the people of America," Kennedy said.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., snapped that wholesale pardons "would be a great contribution . . . of covering up the facts."

Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski could not be reached for comment, though one lawyer on his staff huffed that the White House announcement "speaks for itself."

John D. Ehrlichman, one of the defendants in the up-coming cover-up trial, told reporters that "the problem . . . is that when you know you're innocent, (a pardon) precludes the possibility that your innocence will be established finally." But he would not say flatly whether he nonetheless would welcome a pardon.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., said he had suspected for weeks that "something was in the works" regarding blanket pardons. "I think there was some conversations about this. It didn't just happen abruptly . . . you can put two and two together. I don't think the American people will like it at all."

Senate Republican Whip Robert P. Griffin of Michigan appeared plainly stunned when he read news service bulletins of the White House statement. "Let me think for a while . . ." he told reporters. Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., the minority leader, also declined comment.

Mini-Water Crisis Blunted By City-County Cooperation

and LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writers

There was a flush of victory over the cause of city-county cooperation Tuesday as employees integrated County-City Building restrooms and drinking fountains.

The reason: no running water on the county side of the building, and that forced county employees to use facilities on the city side.

Building Superintendent Henry Lorenz told The Star that the shutoff will last until Friday.

The restroom fountain crisis was caused by a breakdown in standby equipment being installed. When the equipment was hooked up Monday night, water could not circulate because there were no pumps and a water heater broke.

No Pumps Specified

Specifications for the standby equipment did not call for pumps; however, they are being installed now.

Lorenz said it was necessary to shut everything down on the county side to solve the problem.

He said the equipment, approved by the County-City Building Committee, will allow the Lincoln Electric System (LES) to make repairs at the K Street power plant.

Lorenz said the standby equipment, estimated to cost in excess of $20,000 after pumps are included, is not being installed as part of the phase-out of the steam plant which serves the County-City Building.

Depending on how the building committee decides to cope with the scheduled cancellation of the city's steam heat service, the equipment may or may not be permanent, he said.

Given Shutdown Notice

LES Planning Engineer Larry Johnson said that officials at the County-City Building, which is the only steam-heat customer LES serves during summer months, were given about 10 days' notice that the K St. plant would be shut down beginning last Friday.

No Action Taken

He said, a decision was made to tag the house on Friday because no action had been taken to repair the Lindells' home of 24 years.

"This was going on a little too long," Kopines said.

Martin Lindell, who is 81, said he did not think the city code regulations were reasonable. He pointed out that he and his wife have lived in that house for 24 years under the same conditions.

Lindell agreed to help volunteers repair the house, saying, "I love Lincoln and want to stay in Lincoln."

Volunteers Sought

Kopines said volunteers are being asked to help fix up both the exterior and interior of the Lindells' home on Saturday. Letters have been mailed to 44 clubs and organizations seeking some assistance, he said.

An account has been opened in the Lindells' name at a local bank and to date $80 has been contributed.

Kopines said he will need to see Monday that some action has been taken to show conditions have been changed, adding, "We want it (the problem) resolved."

Meat Grading To Be Relaxed

Washington (UPI) — The Agriculture Department Tuesday proposed to give top-of-the-line grade names like choice and prime to some leaner, lower grade beef, possibly resulting in lower prices.

Department officials said the relaxed grading standards, combined with other proposed changes in the federal meat-grading system, would help cut the cost of producing beef by reducing the need for costly grain feeding of cattle.

John C. Pierce, head of a livestock division which operates the Meat Grading Service, told a news conference that the proposed new system would assure more uniformity in the quality of beef under each of the grades normally used for fresh consumer cuts — prime, choice and good. But he declined to guarantee lower prices.

'Net Effect' Cited

"The net effect — increased production at less cost and less waste fat — could be reflected in lower prices at the retail level," he said.

Prime is the highest grade, followed by choice and then good.

Pressure for such a change in the grading system grew recently when the summer drought sharply reduced the corn crop and increased prices for feed grains used to fatten top quality beef. Officials predict that farmers now will shift to marketing grass-fed cattle, which have less fat.

Open To Review

The grading proposal, which will be open to consumer and industry review for 90 days, would:

—Allow some cattle now classed as good grade because they lack sufficient "marbling" fat to be upgraded to choice and some cattle now classed as choice could be upgraded to prime.

—Increase the amount of marbling fat required for some young cattle in the good grade, making it a basically new grade with a much narrower quality range and a higher minimum quality cutoff.

Production Cheaper

Pierce said the new good beef would be cheaper to produce than choice and should "appeal to consumers who prefer beef with less internal and surface fat."

Marbling fat supposedly makes beef more flavorful and tender and has generally been used as an index of quality in the federal grading program, which covers about 80% of all beef sold as fresh cuts.

Officials said proposal was based largely on recent research showing that beef steers under 30 months old need extra marbling fat as they grow older to offset the toughening effect of increasing age. Pierce conceded the research is "not as conclusive as would be desirable," but added that the change would be "in the public interest."

Repairs May Stop Lindell Eviction

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

City Housing Administrator Carl Kopines said Tuesday he will recommend that an elderly Lincoln couple not be evicted from their home this week.

Kopines said he will check the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Lindell on Monday to see if some promised repairs have been made over the weekend to bring the house up to city housing standards.

A hearing was held Tuesday on the appeal in behalf of the Lindells from a city order declaring their house unfit to live in.

Repairs Promised

A major factor in his decision to delay and possibly reject eviction, Kopines said, is the promise by VISTA workers and Legal Aid attorneys that the house will be repaired.

A fix-up, clean-up campaign will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. with various volunteers from the community, including University of Nebraska fraternities and the Elderly Handi-Man Services.

The Lindells' home, at 618 S. 19th, was to have been "red-tagged" by the city last Friday, which would have resulted in the possible eviction of the couple.

Last Minute Appeal

The house was not tagged because of a last minute appeal filed by the Legal Aid Society. Under the city code, a hearing must be held on such appeals.

Kopines, whose office inspected the house and recommended it be declared unfit to live in, will make a final recommendation to the mayor.

On Aug. 6 the mayor had declared an emergency existed to protect the health, safety and welfare of both the Lindells and the public.

But, attorney Gale Pokorny of Legal Aid, charged Tuesday that the city has not shown that an emergency existed in the Lindell case.

Pokorny said the violations listed by the city "simply do not constitute a hazard to the occupants or endanger the public health."

Violations Listed

City housing consultant Garrett Huenink listed a number of violations of the city housing code, including: insufficient electrical outlets, no hot water heater, no furnace, deteriorating roof, rotten wood around windows, excessive rubbish and deterioration of the foundation.

Kopines told some 20 people attending the hearing that he in further negotiations with the Arabs.

Rabin, a former ambassador to Washington, and one-time Israeli chief of staff, made it clear in his response to Ford that Israel, wary of Arab intentions, could continue with diplomatic efforts only so long as it was certain that her security needs were met.

"Only a strong Israel, which has the capacity to deter aggression and to defend herself successfully by her own strength, has a chance of winning peace," Rabin said, speaking softly in English.

'Chilean Junta Continues Executions'

... Amnesty International Reports Few Signs Of Letup

London (UPI) — Amnesty International said Tuesday the Chilean military junta has summarily executed thousands of civilians since taking power a year ago and there are few signs of a letup.

"The death roll of victims is unprecedented in recent Latin American history and there is little indication that the situation is improving or that a return to normality is intended," the organization said.

The special, 79-page report said anywhere between an estimated 5,000 to 30,000 persons are believed to have been killed in Chile since the Sept. 11, 1973, coup that toppled the Marxist government of Salvador Allende. The report said between 6,000 and 10,000 prisoners are still being held without trial.

"Though official executions are no longer announced, disappearances continue," the report said.

In Santiago, backers of the military government planned a mammoth demonstration in support of the ruling junta Wednesday to celebrate the first anniversary of the armed forces takeover.

Amnesty International is a London-based group set up to protect the human rights of political prisoners around the world.

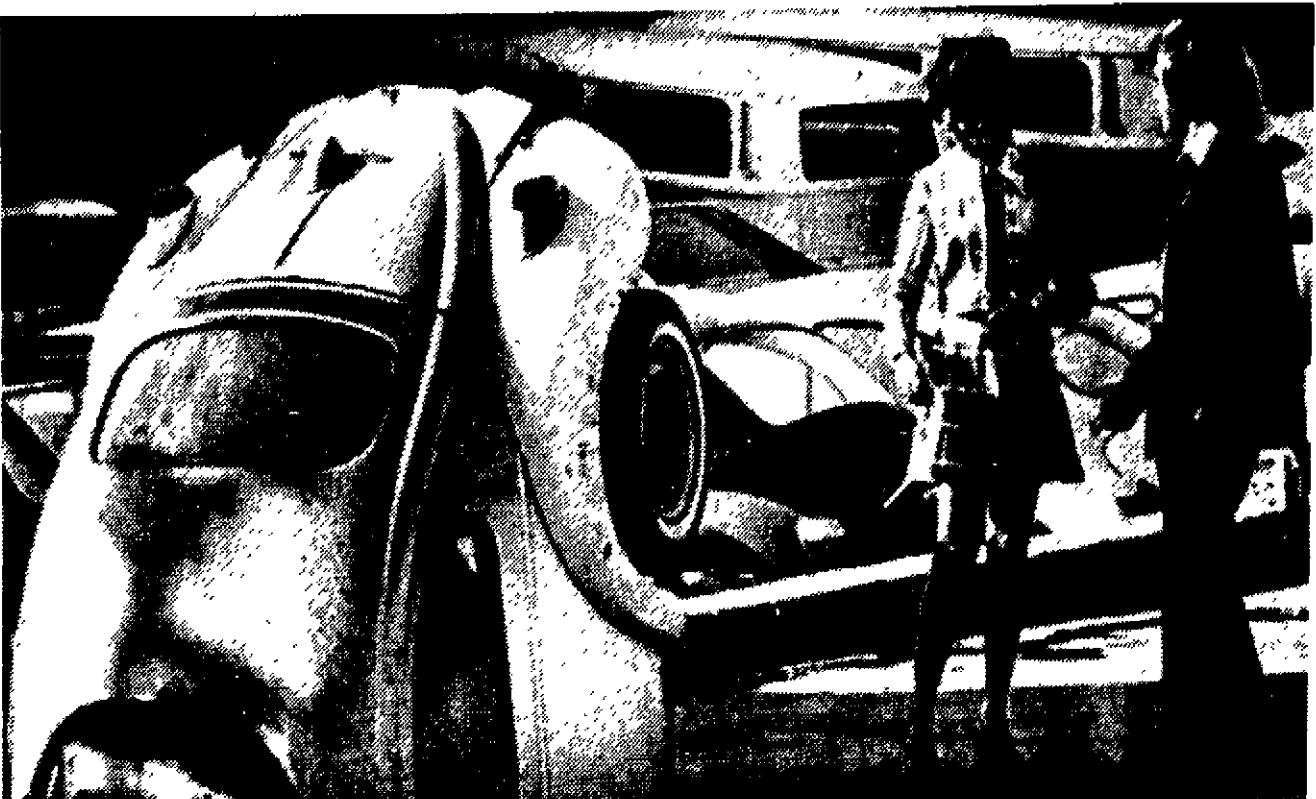

"Twelve months after the coup, despite the government's apparent absolute control of the country, the junta still deems Chile to be in a 'state of war and a state of siege,'" the report said.

The report said torture appears to have become an official policy of the Chilean government and that its claims of prisoners committing suicide are widely disbelieved.

"Repeated assurances from the government that human rights would be respected have proven to be totally unfounded," Amnesty International said.

"Torture is still being practiced, while military tribunals continue to try persons charged with the retroactive offense of cooperating with President Allende's constitutional government prior to the coup,"

Chilean Envoy Rejects Reports

Washington (UPI) — The Chilean government's ambassador to the United States, Walter Heitmann, Tuesday angrily rejected reports of CIA activities in his country and announced the Santiago government will denounce Cuban intervention in Chile during an upcoming Western Hemisphere foreign ministers conference.

Heitmann told a press conference that reports linking Chile's military government with the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) were an "affront" to his country.

Anti-Allende Acts Censored

Washington — The Central Intelligence Agency, citing national security, censored the first printed account of some of the agency's clandestine activities against President Salvador Allende Gossens of Chile from a recently published expose of the intelligence establishment, well-informed sources said.

Warhead Removal Possible

Washington — Officials in both the Pentagon and the State Department are debating whether to leave American nuclear warheads in Greece. Officials agree that legally they should have been removed when the Greeks withdrew from the military command of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. There are no immediate plans, the officials said, to remove the weapons for fear of provoking a total Greek withdrawal from the alliance.

International Banks Helped

Basel — Western monetary authorities, in a calculated move to shore up financial confidence and prevent a collapse of the international banking structure, announced Tuesday "means are available... and will be used if and when necessary" to help banks that get into trouble through no fault of their own. The decision to stretch out a safety net of temporary "liquidity" under international banks was coordinated by finance ministers of the major Western powers at a weekend meeting at a French chateau and put into effect by central bank governors of a wider group of nations at meetings here.

Labor Switch Unlikely

Washington — Top labor leaders, scheduled to meet at the White House Wednesday on the inflation problem, appear in no mood to moderate their pay demands while real wages lag and tight money policies continue to "squeeze" the economy.

Cuban Policy Reviewed

Washington — The U.S. has undertaken review of its entire Cuban policy in the light of recent signs that Fidel Castro is interested in starting a dialogue with this country.

British Inflation Continues

London — Britain's chief financial officer predicted Tuesday British inflation, recently running at 17% a year, would remain in double figures for at least two more years and perhaps longer. In an unusual long-range forecast, Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer, said the rate of inflation could be reduced only if the so-called "social contract" that the government is trying to maintain with Britain's trade unions is effective.

Whites' Rebellion Collapsing

By The Associated Press

A white rebel movement to take over power in Portugal's southeast African colony of Mozambique appeared to be crumbling Tuesday after its leaders handed over control of the radio station they held for three days in the capital of Lourenco Marques.

The atmosphere in the capital, and in Beira and other centers, remained uneasy, however, and heavy police patrols were in evidence after five days of chaos and unofficially 10 deaths. For the third consecutive day, demonstrators occupied the main square at Beira. The troubles were sparked by an agreement Saturday which gives the black movement Frelimo a major role in the provisional government promised for an independent Mozambique in June.

Guinea Bissau, another of the African colonies Portugal is freeing in dismantling the remnants of its empire, officially became the first to receive its independence Tuesday as President Antonio de Spínola signed the documents in a ceremony in Lisbon. Independence for the third colony, Angola, has been promised in two years.

The Movement for Free Mozambique, MFM, leaders who had held the radio station said they capitulated because of widespread violence in the capital's suburbs. Portuguese army officers said they had been preparing troops to seize the station by force when MFM gave in with a broadcast appeal for the armed forces to help restore order in the black shantytowns which ring the capital on three sides.

A police colonel and another officer arrived at the radio station Tuesday morning and were greeted warmly by MFM supporters, police said. A brief conference was followed by announcement of the immediate handover, a broadcast said.

Witnesses said the transfer was made quietly and without bloodshed.

A government spokesman in Lisbon said the end of the MFM siege came before dawn when Portuguese troops took over Lourenco Marques airport from armed white civilians.

It was not immediately clear whether surrender of the broadcasting unit signaled the end of the movement. The rebels have said they wanted independence for Mozambique but did not want Frelimo to take over.

McCarthy For Unilateral Act Of Restraint

Washington (UPI) — Former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, who says he may run for president again, said Tuesday the United States could safely initiate some "limited acts of unilateral restraint" while negotiating disarmament with the Russians.

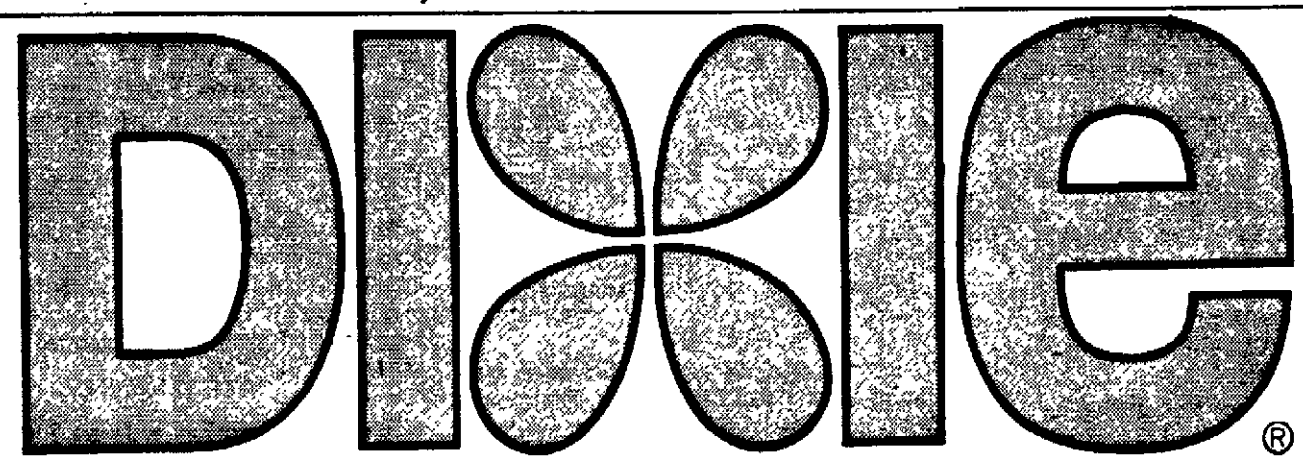

"We can take some limited unilateral acts of restraint without endangering the security of the nation because of our superiority," he told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

McCarthy said the United States had enough nuclear overkill to destroy the Soviet Union 34 times over, while the Soviet Union could destroy the United States 13 times.

Energy Hearing Hoax, Environmentalist Says

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Expert witnesses testified Tuesday that it will take massive infusions of money, research, skill and manpower to enable the country to produce for itself all the energy it needs.

A suburban housewife, speaking for an environmental group, suggested the hearing itself was a hoax.

"Have the decisions already been made?" asked Diane Tegmeier of Shawnee Mission, Kan. "Are these public hearings merely window dressing? Why are we here?"

Speaking for the Mid-America Coalition for Energy Alternatives, Mrs. Tegmeier referred to the timing of 10 regional hearings around the country on "Project Independence."

She said John C. Sawhill, federal energy administrator, has set a Sept. 30 deadline for a Project Independence blueprint; she noted this is 10 days before the final hearing on Oct. 10 in San Francisco. Five days later, she said, the final editing is supposed to be completed for submission of the blueprint to the President and Congress on Nov. 1.

"Can we really expect what we and others say around the nation to be considered in the final blueprint?" she asked.

Mrs. Tegmeier said her organization is made up of individuals and groups in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa working for safe, clean, renewable sources of energy that will make nuclear energy intolerable.

She said policy statements issued by officials of the Federal Energy Administration in recent months indicate a growing reliance on nuclear power, ignoring solar energy.

"It is a replay of the same old policy," she said. "Drain America first and let the same few corporations control it."

Sawhill was to join the panel hearing Wednesday's testimony but his appearance was canceled. James R. Newman, regional FEA administrator for Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Iowa, is conducting the hearings. Sitting with him Tuesday were two of Sawhill's deputies from Washington and Robert Johnston, representing the Interior Department.

Speakers reached beyond $1 trillion in their estimates of what it will cost the United States to become self-sufficient in energy by the middle 1980s.

There was talk that it would take 192,000 additional skilled construction workers, 104,000 additional engineers, 1,250,000 more miners and another 114,000 workers in oil, natural gas, power generation, transportation and transmission of the various forms of energy.

"The numbers are far greater than we can handle — some order must be put into the program," said Robert McClements Jr., a vice president of Sun Oil Co. at Dallas.

Robert H. Freeman, president of Eastern Associated Coal Corp. at Pittsburgh and a director of the National Coal Association, said it will take 125,000 more miners if his industry is to double its production to a rate of 1.2 billion tons a year by 1985.

He said it will also take 130 entirely new rail-and-barge delivery systems and 6,000 miles of pipeline to carry coal gas or coal slurry if that much production is to be moved. He proposed aid to bankrupt railroads, saying the rail system would need 8,000 more locomotives, 150,000 hopper cars to help move the doubled coal production — and they alone could cost $6 billion.

Frank Pollara, special assistant to President George Meany of the AFL-CIO, charged that the oil companies knew the energy crunch was coming and they viewed it calmly because it would enable them to fatten their profits.

Pollara said it is significant that Mobil Oil proposes to use surplus cash from its crisis profits to buy the conglomerate that includes Montgomery Ward, the nation's fourth largest retailer, and Container Corp., the nation's No. 1 producer of paperboard packaging.

The labor spokesman said government ought to help public utilities get the capital they need at reasonable interest rates, but he was against the relaxation of environmental requirements.

Federal Officials To Argue For Higher Electrical Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 100 state public utility commissioners will meet in Washington Wednesday to hear federal officials argue for higher rates for electrical utilities.

The outcome of the meeting and others scheduled in the near future, may be higher electric bills to the consumer.

There was not a general announcement of the meeting until after several consumer groups alleged it was being held in secrecy.

The Treasury Department, which is the chief sponsor of the session, originally planned to bar the press and public from the session, but on Tuesday said the press would be admitted.

A spokesman also said consumer representatives — who earlier were denied participation — would be given a chance to make their views known.

Federal officials invited to participate include Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, Chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board, executive director L. William Seidman of the Summit Conference on Inflation, director John Sawhill of the Federal Energy Administration and chairman John N. Nassikas of the Federal Power Commission.

A Treasury announcement said the meeting was called to discuss "the financial problems facing the electrical utility industry."

A Treasury source said it is understood that the state commissioners will be encouraged to "expedite the pass-through" of higher utility operating costs into rates charged for electricity.

Garry DeLoss, an attorney for consumer advocate Ralph Nader, said that if state public utility commissions begin to allow automatic pass-through of higher utility operating costs, it will do away with their rate regulating responsibilities.

DeLoss also contended in remarks to a newsman that an automatic pass-through of higher costs would reduce the incentives of electric utilities to avoid waste and seek economies in their operations.

Simon has said that electric utilities are faced with inadequate investment capital to meet future energy needs because their profits are not high enough.

Simon and other federal officials want state commissions to speed up processing of rate increase applications from utilities, arguing that present procedures often result in costly delays.

Among consumer groups that will be allowed at the meeting is the Environmental Action Foundation of Washington, which was told as late as Monday night the meeting will be closed.

But Richard Morgan, a foundation representative, said he received a call early Tuesday morning from a Treasury official who said the group would be welcome at the session after all.

Simon Urges Effort To Take Reins Off Energy Development

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon urged on Tuesday "an all-out effort to remove government restraints" on energy development.

As an example of those restraints, Simon cited what he termed "environmental controls of questionable validity" on energy production and use.

Simon spoke at a meeting of the National Petroleum Council, an industry group which officially advises the Interior Department.

Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton joined Simon in advocating removal of federal price regulations from oil and gas.

Morton also said he hoped Congress would act to create a Department of Energy and Natural Resources in its next session.

Also addressing the meeting was Alan Greenspan, new chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

Greenspan said that to fight inflation, the government should tighten the money supply, cut its own borrowing and strive for federal budget surpluses.

Greenspan, Simon and the administration's other top economic officials are to join President Ford on Wednesday in a day-long White House conference with major labor leaders on ways to combat inflation.

The meeting is another of the sessions leading up to Ford's economic summit set for later this month.

Simon offered the most specific outline of proposed energy policies, urging the removal of federal regulation over natural gas interstate pricing.

He went on to suggest:

- Maximum petroleum production from the U.S. Naval Petroleum Reserve at Elk Hills, Calif.
- Exploration of Naval Petroleum Reserve No. 4 in northern Alaska.
- Reopening of parts of the Santa Barbara Channel off California for petroleum development, an area closed after a major oil spill in 1969.
- Vigorous energy conservation efforts aimed at cutting in half the growth rate of energy demand.
- Removal of price controls from oil and gas.
- Phasing out of federal allocation of petroleum.
- Acceleration, already in progress, of federal land leasing for energy development.

Meanwhile, the National Petroleum Council itself issued committee reports suggesting stand-by preparations including large-scale oil storage, to reduce the impact of any new cut-off of oil imports.

One committee recommended that the administration develop standby emergency plans, including a coupon rationing system.

It also recommended that the legal conflict-of-interest and antitrust statutes be revised to allow oil company executives to serve temporarily in government during energy emergencies.

King Canceled Auction

©The New York Times

Taif, Saudi Arabia — King Faisal of Saudi Arabia called off a recent large oil auction, designed to force a reduction in the world price, because of "strong antagonism" toward the measure by other oil producers, according to Saudi government sources.

In return for suspending the auction, the Saudi sources said that Algeria, which has objected to the auction in a letter from President Houari Boumediene to Faisal, had agreed to support the Saudi view that there should be no increase in the posted price of oil before next year.

Faisal has also sent what Saudi sources called a "strongly worded" message to the Shah of Iran calling for an agreement among the major oil-producing nations to freeze prices.

Iran, which is second only to Saudi Arabia in oil exports, has been a leading proponent of a new round of oil-price increases to offset the loss of purchasing power for oil exporters due to inflation in the industrial countries and rising food prices.

The conflict over oil prices has threatened to tear apart the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, made up of 13 countries that account for 85% of world oil exports.

Last June, in an acrimonious opec meeting in Ecuador, Saudi Arabia blocked a major price increase supported by all other members. The organization is scheduled to meet in Vienna Thursday to set prices for the last quarter of this year.

City To Aid Detox Center

The Lincoln City Council has signaled its intent that the city participate in a program that is a welcome departure from the drunk-tank approach to handling problem drinkers.

Monday the council informally authorized an initial $94,000 grant to the Salvation Army to help establish and operate a detoxification center at the organization's building at 7th and P Sts. Formal action on the grant is expected soon.

Although certain policy details are yet to be worked out, the center should be operational by the first of the year. It will provide to the problem drinker who desires treatment and might not otherwise be able to afford it the much-needed emergency recuperative services now unavailable for many people in the Lincoln area.

Under the program, which would be based on a model used by the Salvation Army in other cities, a person picked up by the police for intoxication would have the choice of being taken to the detoxification center for essentially medical help in sobering up and possibly some follow-up therapy or to the police station to be booked (Police would still have the authority to arrest and jail a person they believe to be violent or resisting arrest).

Still up in the air is the question of whether a person would be subject to prosecution for drunkenness after time spent in the detoxification center. If prosecution is the end result in any case, it would, of course, help to destroy the effectiveness of the program as a means to interrupt and possibly halt an individual's problem drinking pattern. But the very existence of the facility, unresolved policy problems notwithstanding, may help to spur support for pending state alcoholism reform legislation aimed at decriminalizing public intoxication.

The detoxification center program apparently has healthy support within city government. Police Chief Joe Carroll, however, reportedly believes that drunk people picked up by the police should be jailed first and then sent to the detoxification center if they so desire. The value of the treatment received at the facility would be lost using that approach, of course, because of the time lapse and the effect on them of being jailed.

Taking a different tack than Carroll, Assistant City Attorney Charles Humble favors the program because "our current process is giving us lots of difficulties — 'we're prosecuting the same people over and over again.' The Salvation Army's plan, says Humble, would offer an alternative to and possibly some help to the chronic drinker.

There has to be an alternative to the present process. Jail does not help solve a problem drinker's problems. It only accentuates them and in the end both the drunk and society suffer for it.

Pardon For Devaney

We think the full and absolute pardon given Cornhusker Athletic Director Bob Devaney by UNL Chancellor James Zumbege is an appropriate end to the story for everybody concerned.

Devaney will not be punished for sending out letters in support of Paul Douglas for attorney general on university stationery. It's just as well. It was duly noted that Devaney's eagerness in support of a friend was contrary to Regent's policy and that it was the innocent mistake of a political novice.

We think it was a mistake, because novices make innocent mistakes. Established politicians rarely do, even though they claim to.

Not receiving the proper attention during all this is the fact that Frank Morrison, Douglas' opponent, has been a friend of the University of Nebraska, too, and we think he would be fair to not only athletes, but everybody, just as we presume Douglas would want to be if he is elected.

As for Nebraska's living football legend, we suppose he will want to spend working hours in the future worrying about his fieldhouse, women's athletics and Big Red schedules rather than politics. Remembering this little episode as he will, and looking to the example of one Charles Wilkinson, another football magician who also was not a wizard at politics.

the small society

WILLIAM V. SHANNON

WASHINGTON — Figuratively speaking, members of Congress nearly broke their arms last week patting themselves on the back for passing the private pension bill. President Ford even helicoptered in from Camp David on Labor Day to sign it.

In a regrettable leap into hyperbole worthy of the late Lyndon B. Johnson, the President said: "This legislation will probably give more benefits and rights and success in the area of labor-management than almost anything in the history of our country."

The reality is much drearier. The bill is a small reform, correcting a few of the worst abuses of private pension plans.

But for most workers who are nominally covered by private plans — fewer than half are — such plans remain what they have always been: a lottery in which most lose and the winners get only a pittance.

A critical section of the new law concerns "vesting." A worker who leaves a pension-covered job has a vested right to a pension if he has worked for a company for a specific length of time. Under the new law, a firm has to give a worker full rights to his pension after 10 years of employment, alternatively, it can give him a right to 25% of his pension after only five years with his stake increasing gradually until he is fully vested after 15 years of employment.

At first glance, 10 years of employment may seem a reasonable prerequisite. But a Senate study of companies that already had such a provision showed that three-quarters of the workers who quit or were fired by those companies left without any pension rights. Money had been regularly credited in their names in those private pension funds, but they never collected a dime. It is hard for people to realize that these plans are financed on the assumption that many participants will never collect.

What about the right to 25% of one's pension after five years? It is one of those rights that sounds a lot better than it turns out to be in reality.

A private pension for a white-collar employee is arrived at by multiplying the number of years he has worked under the plan by a percentage of his annual salary, typically one and one-half per cent. (Plans for blue-collar workers use a flat sum per worker rather than a percentage and usually produce even more meager benefits.) Thus, a worker earning $10,000 a year who leaves his job after five years multiplies his salary by his length of service for a total of $50,000. One and one-half per cent of that is $750 of which he has a vested right under the new law to one-quarter or $187.50 a year when he is 65. With a pension like that, he'll never make it to Miami Beach.

In short, private pension plans are all rigged in favor of the workers who spend most of his working life with one firm. In this fast-moving, technologically innovative economy, it makes no sense — for society or for the individual worker — to encourage plans that reward the stand-patter. The economy benefits if labor is reasonably mobile. As for the worker, how can a young man of 30 know today whether it is in his best interests to stick with the same company until he is eligible for his pension in the year 2009?

Despite all the talk about women's "liberation," the new law once again leaves women holding the bag. If a male worker dies in his late fifties, his widow gets no pension. If he lives to retirement and is already receiving a pension and then dies, she gets only half of what he was getting.

Moreover, she gets that one-half only if her husband had allowed her benefit option to stand. Experience has shown that many workers reject that option because it means the pension during their own lifetimes will be drastically smaller.

Only two percent of widows collect pensions from private plans. Contrast that with Social Security where one out of every three persons collecting a pension is a surviving dependent, and where a widow gets the same basic pension her husband received.

The sad truth is that private pension plans are one of capitalism's bad ideas. Such plans make sense for a few high-salaried executives. But in extending them to all their workers, most companies find they simply do not have the economic base to provide a decent reliable pension to their workers and their survivors. If these plans did not "con" most of the participants out of any substantial benefit, they would go bankrupt.

As it is, many pension plans are technically insolvent. If the stock market keeps going through the wringer, the pension plans of some very reputable companies are going to be in terrible trouble. A study last year found that the pension funds of 375 companies were — on paper — in deficit by more than $10 billion. In the eight months since that survey, conditions have worsened.

Pensions are a job for the government because only the government has the ultimate resources to underwrite an adequate system. When will union leaders and politicians stop trying to patch up the unpatchable and tell people the truth?

New Sports

For Old Sports

Sports

EASTHAMPTON, N.Y. — People who found themselves left out of conversations when friends expounded upon the intricacies of skiing or professional football now have three new worlds of expertise in which to feel inferior: tennis, darts and backgammon.

Lazing about one recent weekend, with nothing more pressing to worry about than a slow-motion stock-market crash, we can address ourselves to "the new sports" which dominate the conversational scene.

Learning to play these sports is a waste of time; faddish gamesmen and athletes will soon be on to something else and the belated learner will feel the way he did when he was just getting the hang of the rumba when the conga and the mambo swept in.

The best way to participate in these new sports is to skip the exertion and learn the lingo, a form of Stephen Potter gamesmanship known to picketing pro footballers as the "play-fake."

In tennis conversation, the tennis faker's verbal serve must be overpowering: A weakly earnest "How's your job life?" is considered a mouth fault. Tennis players rarely talk about the game itself, rather about the difficulty in finding an available court; accordingly, the aggressive tennis faker will urge his associates to meet him at the public courts in Van Cortlandt Park when they open at six in the morning.

Tennis (from the French "tenez," or "Take that!") is more of a racket than a game: They get you by the smart white pants or chic tennis dresses, the expensive sneakers and modish headbands. Join in the complaints about these with gusto, concluding with an interminable story about finding a great place to play only 200 miles from your office.

No person is left out of the current chatter of the new sports if he takes a firm position on the controversy raging through the tennis world: Does one get more swat for the swing with a sheepgut string lacing a wooden racket, or with a nylon twist laced onto an aluminum frame? In tennis politics, this is known as "the gut issue."

The words, "Tennis, anyone?" — spoken by young Humphrey Bogart in an early stage role — still frame a rich man's question. There is little sandlot tennis. But another sport, traditionally more democratic, is taking its place in the forecourt of sport banter.

Darts! The very name sends shivers up the thumb. Darts is the game serfs could play while their feudal masters were cavorting on the tennis courts, and which became inextricably linked with the English pub. Fittingly, the dartboard has replaced the television set in saloons across America.

A pointer about darts: It is not necessary to participate physically, or even to frequent the local tavern, to enjoy the sparkle of darting eyes. There is amusement enough for the darts faker in debating the science of the game, as in "brass darts don't squeeze together on the target as well as tungsten darts do."

Backgammon, which used to be relegated to the flip side of checkers-boards, is a game in which players throw dice and stack up their checkers on skinny pyramids until one or the other gets all his pieces off the board, at which point he wins — or loses, it's hard to remember which — but I will not soon forget that when four people play, it is called "parcheesi."

A daring backgammon faker can insinuate himself into conversation on the beach with, "That was some game — We got up to 64 and I gammoned him," as the verb "to gammon" is akin to the gin rummy verb "to schneider" and a reference to the total pulverization of an opponent in any game brings remembered pleasure all around.

Another conversational gambit

"gambit" is an opening move in chess sacrificing a pawn, but chess is to backgammon what golf is to tennis — last year's topic of conversation) is to dispute the etymology of the name of the game. The Anglo-Saxon derivation would be "back game" — i.e., a game in which pieces are sent back — while its Welsh root is bach (little) cammaun (battle).

A backgammon faker can play the odds, from a kibitzing position: "It's nine to four against being hit on one, you know — but eleven to one against being hit on twelve." A small table carried on the back of a counterfeit parking ticket can take one through an entire summer weekend.

What profound sociopolitical significance can be found in the emergence of "the new sports" at this point in The Times? Perhaps Americans, as a people, have found in tennis the exercise of powerlessness; or, in darts, a squinted-eyed just for zeroing in on targets; or, in reaching backgammon, have found a yearning for normalcy as reflected in the simpler pastimes of the past.

Or maybe the nation, in yakking merrily away in the quasi-conversation of the new sports, is expressing its delight at this first time in a dozen years when it does not have to talk about Watergate or war.

Would Cut Off Funds

Lincoln, Neb.
Some of the figures quoted on funds that may be available to Mr. Nixon in the form of pension and various expenses are appalling.

Opinions may vary on whether or not he should be prosecuted legally the same as other citizens, but surely we can all agree that we don't have to continue to lavish large sums of the taxpayers' hard-earned money on this man, in his self-made exile from high office.

National disgrace at our expense, both emotionally and financially, simply can't call for further remuneration.

D.D.

The Levels Of Justice

Lincoln, Neb.
We have witnessed the most tragic abortion of justice that has occurred in at least the 71 years of my life.

Most of the common people have thought there is more than one level of justice. Now we have the proof — one level for the common person, one for the wealthy or a politician or an ex-president.

One excuse was that he had suffered enough. When a man in the position of president commits a crime, is there any valid reason why he shouldn't have to suffer? I think he should have to suffer the rest of his life and some of it should be done in a penal institution where he would have ample time to contemplate the error of his ways.

Let us hope that by the elections of 1976, we will not have forgotten what happened and give Mr. Ford such a beating at the polls that he will never again be able to pardon anyone.

E. C. WOOD

The Pardon And Politics

Lincoln, Neb.
We have just sent a telegram and a letter to the President expressing our deep disappointment with and resentment of his full pardon for all offenses of Mr. Nixon, even those he may have committed, meaning those of which we do not know as yet.

The pardon, coming before the initiation of any legal proceedings against Mr. Nixon, clamps the lid tight on the most spectacular case of attempted subversion of our governmental institutions and leaves Mr. Nixon's record lily white: He never was impeached, thus he never was tried by the Senate, he admitted nothing in his resignation speech, and now he cannot even be indicted. In addition, he will receive a pension and various expense moneys for travel, staff, and miscellaneous expenses in amounts which the average citizen has trouble pronouncing.

We had hoped that Mr. Ford would make the presidency an office for ALL Americans; unfortunately, he cannot shake off his old habit of being a faithful party politician and nothing more. But we believe that this pardon will do him and the Republican Party and its candidates in the coming election more harm than good.

Readers Deplore President's Full Pardon For Nixon

We also sent a letter to Mr. Thone, urging him to publicly express his misgivings over the pardon and to vote against the appropriation of the enormous funds for Mr. Nixon, telling him that otherwise we shall vote for his opponent in November. In fact, we shall vote against ANY Republican candidate who fails to express his disappointment, misgivings, or at least serious doubt over the Nixon pardon having been granted at this stage of the game.

The American Bar Association and the VFW passed resolutions favoring equal justice for all, including Mr. Nixon. Apparently Mr. Ford wants to continue to use the presidency as a partisan tool rather than making it again the chief office in a government of law with equal justice for all.

Trinity Of Cover-Ups

Lincoln, Neb.
Watergate — and then came the Sunday morning amnesty. The unctuous, pious announcement that "Nixon and his family had suffered enough" came from the same self-righteous conscience that said to war resisters: "Work your way back, you criminals!" How forgiving of a major criminal — how uncompromising of minor ones!

Mr. Ford grants a full, free and unconditional pardon to the one who deceived the American people about the war he was waging illegally in Cambodia and continues at the same time to condemn those who resisted the unconstitutional and immoral slaughter of people in a tiny far-off country.

To the resisters of evil, he said: "Work your way back!" To the perpetrator of high crimes and misdemeanors: "You dealt me the White House; I'll deal you the freedom of the sandy beaches and sunny skies of San Clemente."

We now have the cover-up of the cover-up of the cover-up. Mr. Ford's honeymoon has become an illicit romance. Let's get the Model-T off the road in '76.

A.B.

And, Its Letter Space, Too

Lincoln, Neb.
Seldom have I ever seen so irresponsible a piece of journalism as the article by Bob Guenther in Saturday's Star ("Changing Name . . ."). It concerned the State Department of Labor's proposing to change its name to Job Services of Nebraska.

Let's start with: "At a time when state and national leaders are urging restraint in spending, the State Department of Labor is planning possibly the costliest name change in the state's history." Granting Mr. Guenther the latitude of a "signed" piece, may I ask when state and national leaders last urged non-restraint in spending? Further, if it is possibly the costliest name change, when in the state's history did we witness the most economical name change? The point is that the lead paragraph is simply inflammatory and nothing in the story supports the implications of the lead.

Mr. Guenther points out that the department is proposing to spend some $113,000 of federal funds to finance a publicity campaign regarding this change. Nowhere and at no time does Mr. Guenther make any kind of a case that the $113,000 is not justified, other than he apparently thinks that is a lot of money. Granted, it is a lot of money. But there is room for criticism only if it is shown that the expenditure is not justified.

Is 15 cents too little or too much for a copy of The Lincoln Star? Myself, I firmly believe what this country needs is a cigar that would retail at between 12 and 13 cents, but that is just my opinion.

In the seventh paragraph, he quotes a person involved in the program as stating that a pilot campaign in Virginia increased the number of job placements in that state by 30%. Now, I have no involvement in this whole matter beyond having read the newspaper article. However, it is apparently the expressed purpose of the program that by changing its name to one more reflective of its purpose, more people will obtain jobs and, I assume, others who have been underemployed may find employment more in keeping with their skills and thus earn more money.

In no instance does Mr. Guenther attempt to substantiate a possible contention that the benefits would not justify the expense. I have no knowledge of whether or not a 30% increase in job placements in Nebraska would justify the cost, and Mr. Guenther has failed to enlighten me.

And then there is the matter of the one official who — prudently, I must say — "asked not to be identified" allowed as how that it might accomplish more good if they handed the money to the unemployed. Now, that is really responsible reporting. The unidentified source who makes a totally inane and irresponsible statement, totally devoid of substance, but which apparently added credence to the Guenther judgement that it is a bad deal.

Well, I must say that at a time when state and national leaders are urging judicious use of resources, The Lincoln Star may possibly have made the most extravagant use of its front-page space in the newspaper's history.

Bible-Inspired Graffiti

Lincoln, Neb.
I have just finished reading the Friday morning Star and was touched at the item on Page One showing the man and woman, obviously worried, sitting in front of their home under a crudely printed bit of graffiti: "Do Unto Others As You Want Them To Do Unto You."

Some way, it seems to me that the neighbors who are disgruntled to confront Biblical passages this way might, if they are amused or shocked by the text, ignore all of it and simply call the house their own private conversation piece. We all chase all over the world, if we can afford it, grabbing up bits of strange or unusual objects to place in our homes to be used as conversation pieces. Those of us who can't travel find our conversation pieces on pages of gift catalogues which find their way to our mailboxes.

I have read that the sale of these conversation pieces runs into the millions of dollars annually. Isn't it a shame that those millions are not, instead, used to buy paint and shingles and foundation repairs for men and women who bought their homes years and years ago and thought they were set for life, and who have watched their neighborhoods change from placid fields with lovely memories into a hassle of noise and glares and loving humanity who have not yet learned that the time will inevitably arrive when they, too, will hope and pray for others who will do unto them what they need to give them a decent home, namely, decency, dignity and devoted understanding.

I have a lot of faith in our Sam. (I voted for him.) I know that when a legal paper without distinguishing is plunked on his desk and there is no deterrent to its completion, he feels it his duty to sign. I would hope that he take an hour to consider the meaning of each paper he signs, and if he does that, I know he would not sign anything which would shove an elderly couple out of their home simply because they dare to print Bible passages on their house.

Unique, it is. Would that all unique graffiti were so inspired!

Our Greatest Talent

Lincoln, Neb.
For approximately 10 years, the Host Family Program has been sharing with students from other countries who attend the University of Nebraska. My husband and I have participated in this program for six years and we have traveled to many countries while sitting at our own dinner table. We think it's fun to discover how other nationalities do things and also how much all peoples have in common. This is to encourage others to join us in our "home-chair-share" program.

Nebraskans have a lot to be thankful for. The rain did come to certain people at certain times. Crops will be good for some and bad for others. That's life.

Americans have a lot to be thankful for. Our fellow countrymen who have gone before us have blazed the trail for the luxurious life we have. Our unique "melting pot" has given us so many cultures which, when blended together, create the special "America, The Beautiful."

Americans and Nebraskans are especially fortunate. Education, food and communication have made us more talented than perhaps we realize. We seem, however, to be wasting our greatest talent — ourselves.

Each individual who reads this will have a special thought in mind when he thinks of himself in this light. Perhaps he will remember his ability to farm well, publish well, or teach well. Giving, trusting and sharing make for peace whether in the world or within our unique circle of friends and family. I suggest that others extend their circles to include a student from another country and as they render practical assistance, they will discover the beauty of all the people in this world.

There are some 500 foreign students at the university this year and far too few host families. Those who are interested in the Host Family Program may call Joy Palmer, president, tele. 489-2106.

Faculty Senate Report Urges Pay Fund Hike

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

University of Nebraska-Lincoln officials should ask the Legislature for a 19% increase in overall salary funds for 1975-76, according to a report Tuesday to the UNL Faculty Senate.

The report also urged adoption of a uniform salary schedule based on the University of California step system, advancement through which is based objectively on merit and service.

The salary policy using the step system would "correct disparities" in pay in and among UNL departments and with other universities.

"It would be fortunate indeed if we were to come close to this (request for funds) in a one-year transition," salary committee chairman Donald Haack, engineering mechanics professor, admitted to the senate.

Not Only Solution

He also acknowledged the recommendations do not represent "the only feasible solution to our problem."

Another university-wide committee began studying the salary question in 1972, but has made no report yet. The Faculty Senate committee began in May 1974.

Faculty Senate members took no action on the report. It will be distributed for comment to all UNL faculty and staff, and senate approval will be requested in October.

UNL Chancellor James Zumbege, addressing the senate, said he agrees with NU President D. B. Varner that the university's highest priority now is to raise salaries to meet cost-of-living increases.

From 1967 through 1973, per capita income in Nebraska rose more than 16% in terms of 1967 dollar values.

Decrease Of 7%

During the same period, UNL full professors' incomes decreased about 7% and will fall more than 17% by spring 1975 if present inflation rates continue, the report said.

Besides inflation deteriorating UNL salary levels, the report said UNL is also losing ground in competitive pay among other comparable AAUP universities.

For example, this year only one AAUP in 10 pays less to its full professors and associate professors than UNL does. Eight in 10 pay their instructors more and seven in 10 pay their assistant professors more than those at UNL.

Simply to reach mid-level AAUP projections next year, raises would have to average 25.4% for professors, 18% for associate professors, 11.1% for assistant professors and 15% for instructors.

The overall average increase would be 19%.

The report also cited wide pay differences within UNL colleges.

Now, for example, an Arts and Sciences full professor with credentials equal to an Agriculture full professor earns, on the average, $1,030 less annually. Ironically, economics department faculty members are among the lowest paid at UNL.

The report acknowledges the argument that "improving faculty salaries and removing salary disparities will not improve the faculty, but merely pay it better or more equitably."

Rise In Credit Hours Eases UNL Worries

University of Nebraska-Lincoln Chancellor James H. Zumbege said Tuesday fall semester enrollment is down 268 from a year ago but student credit hours are well above projections, thus relieving some earlier budget worries.

Zumbege said although he expects enrollment finally will exceed 21,000 students, the official UNL count on the sixth day of classes was 20,892. That compares with 21,160 last September.

There is no change from last year he reported to the UNL Faculty Senate, in the percentage of men (61%) and women (39%).

Student credit hour totals decreased from 281,000 in the fall of 1972 to 271,000 last September, Zumbege said; thus UNL officials conservatively projected a similar drop for this fall, to about 260,000.

But student credit hours as of Tuesday were 265,000, which Zumbege called "A good omen."

While there were decreases in the number of freshmen registering this fall compared to last year (from 3,981 to 3,748) and in the number of non-resident freshmen (from 237 to 170), the number of students transferring to UNL is up 10%, he said.

"I hope it is a trend that is beginning," Zumbege said,

The report also cited a 50% turnover rate among all faculty ranks in the last five years.

Adopting the committee recommendations could "show marked improvements in the quality of the faculty in a very few years. Promising young faculty members could be more readily retained and outstanding new faculty more easily recruited."

Nebraska legislators, one faculty member said, might prefer the salary schedule because it provides uniformity and responds easily to across-the-board cost-of-living increases.

The schedule would also relieve department chairman of the burden of deciding subjectively how much of the department's share of salary increases each faculty member should get.

"People who are well paid," now in relation to other faculty "won't like" the proposal and will argue against it, the faculty member said.

because if predictions of continuously declining enrollments hold true, more transfer students will "offset the loss of numbers in the freshman class."

The number of graduate students increased this fall, he said, and part-time and Extension Division enrollments are each up 10%.

The average student study load is 14.8 credit hours.

Overall, Zumbege said, "the situation is more optimistic" than he'd hoped for eight to ten months ago.

However, he cautioned that if enrollments continue to decline with a resulting drop in student credit hours, UNL must either raise its tuition again or seek more support from the Legislature. UNL is obligated to operate under a balanced budget.

Teaching and research needs have exceeded budget expectations by $2 million, Zumbege said, warning that some cut-backs will be necessary to compensate.

Zumbege said he will visit as many of the UNL departments as possible this year to meet with staff in disciplines he knows little about; that will also give him a better basis to recommend any funding changes.

He congratulated faculty members for their increased student counseling and responses to student problems.

Wounded Knee Witness Cuts His Account Short

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Defense attorneys in Lincoln's second Wounded Knee trial Tuesday asked the government to rest its case and asked Judge Warren K. Urbom to acquit the four men on trial.

The move came after a key government witness, Melbert Cut Grass, twice refused to answer questions put to him by special prosecutor Duane Nelson. Cut Grass cited fears for his own safety and that of family members.

Cut Grass testified that he entered Wounded Knee the morning of April 27. The government had apparently intended to question him closely on the actions of the four defendants on that date.

Cut Grass, who also testified he has been absent without leave from the Army since 1970, earlier testified before the South Dakota Wounded Knee grand jury and twice gave statements to the FBI.

Nelson asked Cut Grass, 24, to relate what he had seen Beau Little (one of the defendants) do on April 27.

"For personal reasons, I don't think I can go on," Cut Grass said, "for my own personal safety and my family I refuse to go on."

The jury was excused at that point and defense motions for acquittal followed. Attorney Gerald Werksman also moved for a mistrial on the basis of Cut Grass's testimony.

Prosecutors made no response to the defense request that they rest their case. Earlier a prosecutor said the government intended to call five or six more witnesses.

Earlier in the day Cut Grass asked that Urbom clear the courtroom during questioning by Nelson, who had asked him if seeking a statement he signed on May 6, 1973, on what he saw in Wounded Knee would refresh his recollection.

'Personal Reasons'

Cut Grass said it would, but said he could not say anything more "for personal reasons." He then asked that the courtroom be cleared so he could have a word with the judge and the jury.

The jury was excused.

Under questioning by Nelson, while the jury was still out of the courtroom, Cut Grass testified that he was afraid of members of the American Indian Movement.

He indicated his fear was based on conversations persons had had with his wife.

Shortly after that came a two-hour recess during which Urbom talked with Cut Grass.

After the recess, Nelson again presented the May 6 statement he said Cut Grass gave to the FBI.

'They Typed More'

Cut Grass said of the statement, "they typed out a whole lot more than what I said."

Although Cut Grass said that he saw all four defendants inside Wounded Knee on April 27 and that he saw Dale Red Boy, one of the defendants, fire a shot, he related nothing else of their actions on that date.

Red Boy, Beau Little, Wallace Little Jr. and Roger Iron Cloud are charged with three counts — impeding federal officers, using a firearm in the commission of a felony and assaulting federal officers.

McCollister, reported contributions totaling $13,636 and $13,766 in expenditures.

Fund Raised At Dinner

The State Republican Central Committee reported it raised $40,596 at a June 28 dinner, featuring Rep. John Rhodes, R-Ariz., and claimed a $5,624 cash balance.

The Democratic State Central Committee reported a $17,131 cash balance as of Aug. 21. The party also gave $43,500 to Gov. J. James Exon and Gerald Whelan's election campaign. In addition, $3,300 was given to Hess Dyas, $3,299 to Dan Lynch and $308 to Wayne Ziebarth.

Dyas Outspending Thone In Campaign

Hess Dyas, Democratic candidate for Congress from Lincoln, is currently spending $2 on his campaign for every $1 incumbent Rep. Charles Thone spends.

Campaign finance reports in the secretary of state's office indicated thus far Thone has spent $31,616 while Dyas reported spending $64,901.

Since June 1, Dyas has also outspent Thone. The reports showed that Dyas has raised $27,847 since June 1, compared to Thone's $16,545.

As of Aug. 31, Thone's re-election committee had a $17,951 cash balance, and Dyas' committee had $1,307.

Dyas' contributors included the Railway Clerks Political Action League, $1,000 and COPE (an AFL-CIO branch), $2,000.

Dyas' committee also reported $1,500 in proceeds from an Aug. 11 reception with Rep. James Abourezk of South Dakota.

Thone's committee reported a $1,000 contribution from the Nebraska Republican Congressional Committee.

Martin Gift $28,000

Mrs. Haven Smith, the Republican Third District congressional candidate, reported receipt of $28,000 from outgoing Rep. Dave Martin's committee in addition to $1,000 from the Conservative Victory Fund.

Since June 1, Mrs. Smith's committee had contributions totaling $36,204; after expenditures, the committee reported a $27,308 balance.

Opening lead - king of clubs.
There is some difference of opinion about what constitutes a percentage play, but often the question is more a matter of semantics than arithmetic.

Assume you're in four spades, and West leads the king of clubs. You ruff and play a spade to the queen, losing to East's ace. Back comes a club, which you ruff again.

You lead a heart to the jack, return a spade on which East plays the nine, and now face a crucial decision. Do you play the ten or the king?

The so-called percentage play is the king — because mathematically East will be dealt the A-9 more often than the A-J-9.

But the proper play — considering the hand as a whole, rather than only the spade suit — is the ten. There is the very best of reasons for playing the ten, namely, that you guarantee the contract if you finesse and run the risk of going down if you don't.

Note that in the actual hand, when you finesse, the ten wins and you easily make the hand by scoring five spades, four hearts and a diamond.

But note also that if the ten loses to the jack you are equally on firm ground. In that case, your only losers would be two spades and a diamond — since you can discard three diamonds from dummy on the A-K-Q of hearts and thus restrict yourself to one diamond loser.

In the actual hand, if you play the king of spades instead of the ten, you go down against proper defense. East wins your diamond lead to the queen, cashes the jack of spades, returns the ten of diamonds, and in that way finishes you off. The so-called percentage play would fail.

Home Canned Food Can Be Poisonous

A report in the Journal of the American Medical Association indicates that an increase in home canning by people seeking to save money on food bills presents a growing health hazard from botulism.

A four-year study showed that of 30 outbreaks of food-borne botulism reported to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., only three were caused by commercial foods.

Jeans And Shrinks Still Campus Rage

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

Tailored slacks may be coming, skirts may be making a stupendous return, but neither have hit campus in overwhelming numbers — yet. No matter what fashion magazines and stores are pushing, blue jeans still get the nod from the young women on campus — at least at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

And the casual attire doesn't stop there.

Monday, when the temperatures soared into the mid-80s, halters and shrinks far outnumbered tailored shirts, sandals and bear traps were more abundant than the small-heeled platform oxfords expected to be the campus rage this fall.

The 10 coeds interviewed by The Star agreed that what they look for in clothes is comfort. From the looks of things, their peers apparently agree.

"I'm a theater major. I have to wear something I can move around in, something I can roll around the floor in," said Becci Dawson, a junior and member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority. Although dressed in green flared jeans and an attractive blouse, she said she "almost always" wears cuffed bluejeans — "If I can find them — with halter tops in the summer, workshirts in the winter."

Jonel Larson, freshman, regularly wears cut-offs or jeans, "anything that's clean," when she bicycles between the Neihardt Residence Center and her classes. The remainder of her wardrobe consists of polo shirts, tee shirts, clogs, tennis shoes, earth shoes and an earth shoe burlap sack in which she carries books and notebooks.

What Janet Behm, a sophomore, wears to class "depends on the day." Some days, she appears in classes in uncuffed bluejeans, most days she wears tailored slacks. For winter she plans to wear sweaters and sweater sets. And she said she will stick with the height-deceiving platform shoes.

While faded blue jeans and their accompanying cutoff shorts worn by young women with slightly curled hair of chin-length or longer apparently make up the standard campus uniform, personal tastes take over to help establish individuality of appearance.

Julie Hurt, Alpha Phi freshman, dressed up her cut-offs and tank top with a neck scarf, clutch bag, earrings, watch, wedge shoes and nail polish on fingers and toes for a Monday stroll around campus. As a change of pace, she also considers jeans or dress or corduroy slacks a major part of her campus attire.

On the other hand, Sue Aitchison, fourth-year architecture student and director of the Women's Resource Center, rejects make up and jewelry. Her basic wardrobe is made up of jeans, tee shirts, workshirts, sneakers, boots and wide leather belts.

Dawn Schreurs, Chi Omega junior, is in jeans "80% of the time." On warmer days, she tops them with midriff-revealing sweaters or shirts, other times she wears sweaters or sweater sets.

Individuality, however, goes even farther than the blouses, sweaters, shoes and accessories — at least for some coeds.

A smattering of skirts — most well above the knee, others at the knee — can readily be spotted on campus.

And some college women even dare to say they prefer skirts to the ever-popular jeans and slacks, still apparently the mainstays of most campus wardrobes.

"I never wear jeans," said Sue Kost, Alpha Omicron Pi junior. Instead, she prefers knee-length skirts, but on occasion puts tailored slacks and matching blouse with her bangle bracelets and higher heels.

Sherrill Prideaux, Alpha Omicron Pi freshman, also has opted for skirts. "The longer ones are more comfortable," she said.

To her skirts, she adds blouses or sweaters, a watch, pierced earrings, a shoulder bag and sandals or wedgies for a well put together look.

And Miss Prideaux's individuality of taste has escaped her wardrobe and gone right to her head. She wears her hair shortly cropped — at a time when most coeds lovingly covet their long tresses.

DAWN SCHREURS... prefers casual attire.

More Women Get Pap Test

Nearly 80% of American women had pap tests for cancer last year, according to a Gallup poll financed by the American Cancer Society.

The figure has doubled since a previous poll, taken in 1963, showed only 40% had taken the test.

The Cancer Society said the new study also showed there have been slight to moderate gains in the past 10 years among people who have had other cancer-detection tests: chest X-rays and skin, breast, colon and rectal examinations.

Do Women Executives Put Down Secretaries?

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

It has been said that secretaries are at the bottom of the business world and are frequently put in their place by other females who have finally attained executive positions.

In a recent article published by the Chicago Daily News, Chicago secretaries related their respective tales of woe to reporter Patricia Moore, who wrote, "secretaries who don't need any reminder of their lowly position especially resent this kind of treatment from their own sex."

According to Ms. Moore, "female office worker chauvinism works in many ways," including out-and-out snobbery, cold isolation and indignant denunciations of "No, I am not the secretary," to callers within the earshot of office secretaries.

Kay Glassman, 19, and a new secretary with a Chicago Law Firm was quoted in the article, "I definitely resent it more getting that kind of treatment from a woman. We're all in this together and if women don't respect each other, men won't."

However, Lincoln secretaries interviewed reflect a completely different type of situation. They take pride in their work and regard themselves as professionals. They admire and support women in executive positions and contend that they have encountered no demeaning attitudes solely from women.

"The higher you get, you have a tendency to look down at those working under you," noted Mrs. Julius Ross, who was a legal secretary for 10 years and is current president of the Lincoln Legal Secretaries Association.

"I've heard of an individual or two that might have tried to pull rank," she continued, "but any great executive, man or woman, should remember that they started at the bottom at one time or another."

Mrs. Ross also noted that she had never been confronted with rudeness or belittling attitudes on the behalf of women executives.

"I admire women who have reached higher positions," she said.

Pat Stefkovich, a secretary for David, Bailey, Polsky, Huff and Denney, believes that the attitude of one's employer will greatly affect how his clients, customers and associates will treat his secretary.

"It depends on the office and the boss," she said. "My boss thinks I'm the greatest. He's terrific and has treated me as his right hand and assistant, rather than a clerk typist."

"I have seen that (unfavorable attitudes toward secretaries) in other offices. A lot of time the bosses think that the secretary is just there to type and not use her mind."

"But I haven't run into that and I don't have too much trouble, because of all his (her employer's) clients know me."

Helen Muenchau currently is a secretary to one of "those" female executives at Bankers Life Nebraska.

What does she think of her job and her boss?

"I think it's wonderful," she said. "She is more than my boss, she is a friend. I can talk to her and she talks to me."

"I'm very proud of her and I hope she is proud of me."

And Mrs. Muenchau has not been the catch-all for demeaning insults or rudeness from other women in positions higher than hers.

As she puts it, "Females have mellowed because they are getting something they should have gotten long ago."

That secretaries too take pride in their positions was indicated by those who work at becoming better at their jobs by taking classes or by joining professional organizations to promote their status.

"Legal secretaries are firm believers that a good legal secretary is very professional and she strives to be even better," Mrs. Ross explained. "Our purpose in the Lincoln Legal Secretaries Association is to promote more professionalism among our members."

"If a secretary has enough self-confidence and professionalism, she should be secure in her own position and hope to be promoted."

"Legal secretaries think a lot of themselves," concurred Mrs. Stefkovich. "We are really working in the para-legal program, because so many of us have worked with our bosses so long that we really know more about the routine things."

"Most secretaries think a lot of their abilities and want to improve themselves and their relationships with their bosses," she added. "Some secretaries are just content to be at the typewriter and put in their time, but you really don't see this too much."

"A secretary does a lot more than people realize," Mrs. Muenchau said. "I've been a secretary for a good number of years and I certainly would not look down on it."

"I have absolutely no qualms about being a secretary."

Credit Hearing Set Saturday Morning

A second hearing to examine possible discriminatory credit practices in the state will be held Saturday in the State Capital, Room 2102 at 9:30 a.m.

Several of the witnesses at the first hearing before the legislature's Banking Committee asked for a weekend or evening hearing time for the convenience of working women and minority group members.

She's Left Out Of Husband's Will

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for nearly two years. This is the second marriage for both of us. I was a widow with very little money, and he was a widower with quite a lot. We both have married children.

He just told me that he is leaving everything he has to his children. I get nothing. His children practically ignore him. They are just waiting for him to die. On those few occasions when he sees them, they show him no respect or consideration at all. My children treat him much nicer than his own do.

I am not a rich woman, but I made out my will to leave three-fourths of everything I have to my children and one-fourth to him. Should I change my will and leave my children everything?

He is 70, overweight and has high blood pressure. If he dies first and leaves me nothing, I will have to eat up my capital, and I am afraid I won't have enough to bury him. What should I do?

REMAINING ANONYMOUS

DEAR REMAINING: Leave everything to your children. If he dies first, his children will be only too happy to bury him.

DEAR ABBY: Is there anything really improper about a single female walking into a top-notch restaurant to lunch or dine alone, aside from the fact that it takes a certain amount of nerve to do so?

I am a lover of good food, and I don't always have an escort to take me where I'd like to dine. However, I wouldn't want to look like I'm trying to pick up someone because I came in alone.

What say you? WONDERING DEAR WONDERING: Quit wondering and treat yourself to a lunch or diner wherever you can afford to go. As long as you mind your own business, you need not worry about giving anyone the wrong impression.

DEAR ABBY: This is in regard to "Desperate," whose widowed mother started "running around" at age 62, joining different social clubs, including a "swingers' club." I would get down on my hands and knees and thank God for such a mother. Most sons and daughters complain because their widowed mothers refuse to take an interest in anything other than their children and expect "the family" to entertain them constantly.

And if a 62-year-old widowed mother should be lucky enough to find herself a man for companionship (with or without marriage) it would be a blessing for everyone, for she would then be living her own life, and freeing her children to live theirs. NOT FREE IN N.J.

State Politicians Frown On More Pardons

By The Associated Press

Reaction to word that President Gerald Ford is considering pardons for all involved in the Watergate scandal, whether they be convicted or accused, brought a general reaction of disapproval from Nebraska's political hierarchy Tuesday.

However, the reaction was tempered by an attitude that nothing definite on the issue has yet been decided by the White House.

Republican Sen. Carl T. Curtis said the President has not asked his advice, and he has not volunteered any to the President on the issue.

"I am not aware of what all they have in mind," Curtis said of the study, which is apparently underway in Washington.

On the other hand, Curtis said, "I do not think that these other defendants in the Watergate cases have a situation that's comparable to former President Nixon's."

"Nixon has been punished beyond what any of us can describe."

Curtis repeated his earlier observations, that the former president is not being punished with merely a life sentence, but a sentence that will "span as long as history."

"It is a punishment that few offenders will ever be called on to bear," Curtis added.

"The other defendants have not drawn such punishment and anguish they have to a degree, but it's not the same," Curtis said.

However, Curtis suggested the possibility that further pardons might be considered on an individual basis.

Curtis also said his mail on the pardoning of Nixon has been light, including one telephone call from Lincoln approving of the pardon, and two letters opposing President Ford's action.

Gov. J. James Exon, a Democrat, was much more adamant, saying, "I think it would be a disaster."

"The results of this would be that the President would, by presidential decree, forever stamp into the judicial system that there is indeed a double standard of justice," Exon said.

The governor added that Ford may have trapped himself by not considering the question of "lesser lights" before making his decision to pardon Nixon.

Third District Rep. Dave Martin, a Republican, was en route back to Washington after a weekend at home in Kearney, and was not immediately available for comment.

An aide in Martin's Washington office said the congressman was not expected in the nation's capital until late Tuesday night.

Dan Lynch, a Democrat seeking the 2nd District Congress-sional seat now held by incumbent Republican John Y. McCollister, said he does not favor further pardons, but that he expected such a move by Ford.

"He pardoned a fella, (Nixon) who was not convicted of anything yet...I guess it follows. He (Ford) would probably have to give in good conscience some serious thought to everybody else that was involved. I'm not sure how far down the line that goes," Lynch said.

State Sen. Richard Marvel, Republican candidate for governor, said he would not support a blanket pardon for the Watergate defendants.

Marvel said he would support pardons on a case-by-case basis if it could be shown that an individual was wrongfully convicted or if false testimony was given against him.

The Hastings senator said he supported the Nixon pardon on grounds that it would bring the country together and close the door on Watergate. He said he assumed Ford had evidence available to him to support the Nixon pardon.

Marvel said Nixon's health was mentioned as a reason for Nixon's pardon, and added that the Nixon pardon was handled on a case-by-case basis and it was done for the benefit of the country.

Dyas Accuses Thone Of Being 'Out Of Step'

Hess Dyas, First District Democratic congressional candidate, said Monday night that his opponent, Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., is "clearly out of step" with district residents on the issue of President Ford's pardon of Richard Nixon.

In a statement, Dyas said, "It is astonishing to me that Mr. Thone goes along with the pardon, and it indicates he is sadly out of step with the opinions of a strong majority of Nebraskans."

Dyas was in rural Wayne County Monday while continuing his walk of 734 miles across the First District to meet citizens and discuss issues with them.

Earlier, Dyas described the presidential pardon as "a premature act" and added it was inappropriate to pardon someone before "charges were filed, indictments handed down and any guilt or innocence determined."

Peace Group Charges Ford 'Part Of Coverup'

The Nebraskans For Peace said the pardon granted to Richard Nixon now makes President Ford "a part of the coverup of Watergate and related events."

"Political expediency has made a travesty of equality before the law and due process," the group said in a news release.

The group said Ford's action toward Nixon leaves the President no choice but to grant amnesty to war resisters.

"Any plan less than unconditional amnesty will merely be a continuation of the dual standard of justice that existed during the Nixon years."

"Without such an action Ford will have already lost the trust of many Americans who had hoped that a sense of justice may have returned to the White House," the statement concluded.

Dangerous Precedent Set By Use Of NU—Morrison

Omaha (UPI) — Democratic attorney general candidate Frank B. Morrison said Tuesday his opponent, Paul Douglas of Lincoln, had created "a dangerous precedent" by using the University of Nebraska as "a political tool."

Morrison said at a news conference it was his understanding through newspaper stories that Douglas "went to the director of athletics of the university and used the department... as a political tool to help achieve his goal as head of the Justice Department of state government."

"I believe this to be a dangerous precedent and he (Douglas) has made it an issue in this campaign," the former 3-term governor said.

"As a lawyer and a citizen I believe it is wrong because it presents a potential conflict of interest," Morrison said. "It promotes further disrespect for objectivity in the judicial system."

The conflict centered around the sending of pro-Douglas letters to former university athletes on the stationery of the university athletic director Bob Devaney.

Devaney told UPI Tuesday at Lincoln that only two such letters were sent out. University Chancellor James Zumbege said earlier that Devaney was "a political novice" and that no university action was contemplated.

Morrison said he had no comment on that statement. "I have never interfered with university policy and I don't now," he said.

However, he pointed out that Douglas has been in Lancaster County politics for 18 years and "he certainly is no novice." Morrison said Douglas approached Devaney "as county attorney charged with law enforcement and as a seasoned political figure."

Morrison, who said he had seen one copy of the letter, said he had no idea why Devaney endorsed Douglas. He said the copy was given to him by "a member of the black community," but emphasized he was not the one who released it to the media.

Bond Hopes To Influence '76 Demo Choice

Atlanta, Ga. (AP) — Black politician Julian Bond says he hopes to arrive at the 1976 Democratic convention with enough support to influence the party's choice for president. And he sees himself as one of the choices.

At 34, Bond, former member of the Georgia House and newly elected state senator, is an urbane, articulate politician and professional lecturer. He estimates in the past six or eight years he has spoken to more than five million persons throughout the United States.

Politically ambitious, he is already at work building a power base for the presidency through his lectures, his contacts with both black and white politicians and his campaigns in their behalf.

Bond is credited with spearheading the large black vote in Georgia which played a major role in George Busbee's recent victory over segregationist Lester Maddox in the Democratic gubernatorial runoff.

Asked if he really hoped to win the presidency, Bond replied: "Oh yes."

"Big Undertaking"

"I know it's a big undertaking I'd raise as much money as I could I'd hire a very, very small staff, and I'd go to work. I know almost all the elected black officials in the United States."

Every time he travels nationally, he says: "I try to touch base with politicians... eventually that builds a power base."

If he runs and does lose, what will he have accomplished?

"If everything goes the way I would hope it goes, I would arrive at the Democratic convention in '76 with a sizeable bloc of the delegates pledged to me," he said. "And let's say the candidates are Jimmy Carter, governor of Georgia, Scoop Jackson, Teddy Kennedy, George Wallace. I would say to them — all of them — have a set of principles here. They're not abstract they're very real and very concrete."

"And if you want these delegates, you must agree to this set of principles and whichever one of you does can have these votes."

Principles Defined

He defined the principles as the same 30-odd proposals the black congressional caucus made to President Nixon in 1971.

Bond said he would want to pledge that the candidate would work for more black education, do certain things in foreign policy toward black Africa and insure that the war on poverty continues and is improved.

In 1972, Bond says there should have been several black presidential candidates and they

15 Counties Meet Drought Aid Requirements

Washington, D.C. — U.S. Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Nebr., said Tuesday information requirements have been met clearing the way for U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz to issue federal drought disaster declarations for 15 Nebraska counties.

He said 18 other counties' applications are being sent back to Nebraska for certifications from local banks as to the need for emergency loans at federally-subsidized 5% interest rates for specific numbers of each bank's customers.

Seven counties' applications are still being processed by the Farmers Home Administration in Washington to determine whether the information requirements have been met.

Cleared By FHA

The 15 counties which have been cleared by the FHA for the secretary's action are Antelope, Boone, Colfax, Douglas, Howard, Jefferson, Nuckolls, Richardson, Pawnee, Sarpy, Webster, Greeley, Knox, Saunders and Dixon, according to Curtis.

"Gov. Exon's accusation that Secretary Butz and others on his staff have been delaying the approval of these applications is false and politically motivated," Curtis declared.

"Last week the governor's director of agriculture, Mr. Glenn Kreuscher, contacted my office by telephone and asked why no applications by Nebraska counties had been approved by the secretary yet," Curtis said.

Many Incomplete

"My office informed him that many of the applications were not accompanied by letters or reports certifying that local banks were not able to meet the credit requirements of specific numbers of their customers because of the drought disaster conditions."

Curtis said the governor "later the same day sent a flamboyant telegram to Secretary Butz ignoring the information which my office had given to his director of agriculture."

Contrary to Exon's claim, Curtis said, a majority of the applications which have been sent to the secretary through the governor's office as well as some submitted through the FHA state office at Lincoln did not meet the information requirements of the federal emergency loan law and the regulations issued April 24, implementing that law.

Protect Funds, Help Victims

"The law and the regulations are designed to protect the integrity of tax funds used in this important program to help unfortunate victims of natural disasters," Curtis said.

"Abuses such as those which occurred following the 1972 Los Angeles earthquake, when the federal loans and grants were used to build backyard swimming pools at expensive private homes, must be avoided if the program is to be preserved for those really needing its help."

Curtis said he has contacted the State Department of Agriculture several times in behalf of the Nebraska congressional delegation urging that the processing of county disaster applications be expedited.

He said Exon knew of these contacts but "persisted in his practice of taking public potshots at everyone working in the program instead of cooperating to get the information required to clear the applications in accordance with the applicable law and regulations."

As for Exon's charge that delay explanations given by Department of Agriculture officials and Curtis' office were "hogwash," Curtis replied, "the governor is attempting to deal with a problem by coughing up bilge water."

Burbach Opposed To Tax To Support Tech Colleges

State Sen. Jules Burbach said Tuesday he was opposed to a five mill property tax for the support of technical community colleges.

At a Revenue Committee meeting last week, Burbach said a five mill property tax levy could be used to finance technical community colleges. Although Burbach said the possibility for the property tax did exist, he said he did not support it.

He said several persons had misinterpreted his stand, believing that he supported the property tax. Burbach said he was always favored property tax reduction.

The State Supreme Court ruled that a one mill levy for financing technical community colleges was unconstitutional.

Burbach said, "For now I would say we should finance the technical community colleges from the state general fund."

The award commends Warp for "decided achievement in the interpretation and preservation of Nebraska history."

The James L. Sellers Memorial award will be presented to Oliver Knight, professor at the University of Texas.

The day-long meeting and workshop at the Lincoln Hilton includes sessions on financing historical research and preservation and display of artifacts.

First National Correspondents To Attend Meet

Bankers from Tokyo, Japan; Milan, Italy, and Toronto, Canada, will be among representatives of the First National Bank of Lincoln's 355 correspondent banks at a convention Friday and Saturday in Lincoln.

More than 750 people are expected to attend the 1974 First National Lincoln Correspondent Conference, the bank said. The annual conventions are intended to keep correspondent bankers up to date on bank policies and national monetary developments.

Duane C. Acker, vice chancellor of the University of Nebraska Agriculture and Natural Resources Institute will speak about a "Positive Approach to Nebraska Agriculture" at a Friday afternoon session.

UNL Head Football Coach Tom Osborne is scheduled to speak about university football. Panels and workshops center on state agriculture and business.

First National also has correspondent banks in Nebraska, Iowa, South Dakota, Colorado, Kansas and Missouri.

Council Backs 2nd Scottsbluff TV Station

Scottsbluff (AP) — The Scottsbluff City Council voted Monday night to send a letter to the Federal Communications Commission expressing support for an application by KDUH-TV to make Scottsbluff its dual city of license.

KDUH-TV is based in Hay Springs and seeks to open a studio in Scottsbluff while maintaining its present facilities.

KDUH-TV, a subsidiary of Duhamel, Inc., of Rapid City, S.D., contended it has lost more than $250,000 over the last four years.

The request for support was protested by KSTF-TV of Scottsbluff, owned by Wyneco, Inc., of Cheyenne, Wyo.

Bill Brennan, general manager of KSTF-TV, said Scottsbluff did not need two stations.

But the council members said they wanted to encourage the growth of the city.

A Federal Communications Commission hearing is scheduled on the application in about 30 days.

I-80 Finished; Celebration Planned

Sidney (AP) — The work all started March 8, 1965, with an upgrading of U.S. Highway 30 near Kimball, and the job will officially be completed Oct. 19, when Gov. J. James Exon and other national and local officials mark the completion of Nebraska's 455-mile mainline Interstate 80 project.

Plans for a celebration are well underway here, under the direction of Lodgepole banker E. K. Yanney.

Yanney announced Tuesday

Court Told 35 Years Is Proper

By United Press International

The State Justice Department told the Nebraska Supreme Court Tuesday the 35-year to life sentence for a man convicted of second degree murder in the stabbing death of a Niobrara infant should stand.

Antonio Almo Laravie, convicted by the Knox County District Court of second degree murder in the death of Chad Olson last Aug. 18, appealed to the high court seeking a lesser sentence.

The Justice Department agreed with Laravie's attorneys the Legislature, in authorizing up to life for second degree murder, felt heavier penalties should be reserved for the "more heinous crimes."

"We cannot agree, however, that this crime was not heinous and that the offender does not present a serious threat to society," the department said.

The Justice Department told the high court on the question of whether it was a heinous crime or not, "The defendant simply walked into the baby's room in the middle of the night and stabbed him."

The department said, "The record shows that in the last seven years the defendant has been involved in at least three incidents of malicious mischief, five incidents of breaking and entering, four incidents of disturbances or disorderly conduct and nine thefts."

In other words, the department said, "The record shows that the defendant has disregarded the rights of other people on many occasions and that he is likely to do the same in the future."

Under the terms of the sentence the man received, the department noted, a 35-year minimum means he would be eligible for parole, by the calendar, after serving 20 years, four months and eight days.

Ag Electricity Tax Refund Plan Eyed

North Platte (AP) — Nebraska farmers would be refunded the amount of sales tax they pay on electricity for producing commodities if a plan proposed Monday to the Legislature's subcommittee on public power were put into effect.

Jerry Reinhard, Broken Bow area farmer and director of the Custer Public Power District, introduced the plan at a subcommittee hearing in North Platte.

Reinhard noted that state law exempts from sales taxes that portion of electricity used in producing farm commodities. But farmers can take advantage of the exemption only if the electricity they use in agricultural production is metered separately from household consumption.

Separate metering, Reinhard said, usually costs the farmer more than the sales tax exemption saves.

Reinhard's plan would be similar to one that has been used in Minnesota since 1969. Under the Minnesota law, farmers take a credit on their state income tax for sales tax paid on electricity used in agricultural production.

Reinhard said that under his proposal, a farmer would pay sales tax as usual, but would apply for a refund at the end of the year. The amount of the refund would be determined by multiplying the sales tax rate (now 2½%) and the income reduction which the federal government allows the farmer for agricultural production.

"This would put the burden on each individual farmer to collect his own refund, and the power district would be left out of the issue," Reinhard told the Unicameral subcommittee, headed by Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook.

Rural public power districts in Nebraska have opposed deduction plans which would require complicated bookkeeping, Reinhard said.

that astronaut Robert F. Overmeyer, a member of the joint U. S.-Soviet space project, will be in attendance at the ceremonies.

Other guests will include all of the state's living ex-governors, past and present State Highway Commission members and the contractors involved in the 19-year undertaking.

Exon and the Highway Commission have also invited the mayors and chamber of commerce presidents from all cities along the interstate.

Invitations are also being sent to U. S. Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar, and to members of the state's congressional delegation.

Yanney said plans include a parade, exhibits, and bicycle, horse and roller-skating races down the portion of the interstate which is awaiting opening.

Several transportation oriented activities, including an air show, are also scheduled.

The current, 20-mile gap, which extends from Sidney to

Annexing OKd At Scottsbluff

Scottsbluff (AP) — The Scottsbluff City Council approved the annexation ordinance for Nebraska Western College Monday night.

Potter, will remain closed until the opening ceremonies.

The completion of the highway will be marked at a point about five miles west of here with a set of brass plates extending across both east and westbound lanes of the highway.

Nebraska will be the first state in the nation to complete its mainline interstate allocation.

About six weeks ago, the council approved annexation but had to withdraw it after learning that the legal description placed the college one mile west of its location and in the city limits.

Bellevue Man Dies After Cycle Injury

Cheyenne, Wyo. (AP) — A Bellevue, Neb., man died in a hospital here Monday, about seven hours after his motorcycle slammed into the rear of a Wyoming Highway Dept. vehicle.

The mishap occurred on Interstate 25, about 1½ miles south of here.

The Highway Patrol identified the victim as Gary McKenna, 27, and said McKenna ignored warning signs being held by a highway workman, continued down the highway and slammed into the rear of the work vehicle.

Desegregation Aid Rejected

Omaha (AP) — A 15-year-old senior at Cathedral High School in Omaha has had her efforts rejected — at least temporarily — to help out in the Omaha School District's desegregation efforts.

Mary Lyons told a Board of Education Committee Monday that Technical High School Principal Odra Bradley, citing school district regulations, said she could not attend Tech part-time because she is enrolled in a parochial school.

Miss Lyons said attending the classes isn't all that important to her. Rather, she told the committee, she wants to assist as Tech converts to a so-called "magnet" school. Under the approach, white students are being encouraged to attend Tech fulltime or part-time, taking some courses they can't get at their own schools.

The school district's efforts at recruiting students have been aimed at other Omaha School District high schools in the area. Students from parochial schools have in the past attended classes in the district, but usually before or after the regular school day.

Board President Paul Kennedy said he has nothing against the idea if it's legal. He said one hangup could be whether public funds should help educate a student who will ultimately be graduated from a parochial high school.

He conceded, however, that the question isn't classic separation of church and state, since no religious instruction would be involved. But board member the Rev. R. F. Jenkins raised the point. Kennedy said he personally saw nothing in school district policy that would prohibit Miss Lyons from attending a public school.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast For Wednesday

For late, more physicians, psychiatrists and psychologists are showing an interest in astrology as a valid tool in aiding their patients. If it keeps up, there will be a move to "change the name," to call astrology something else, to bring it under the province of the same persons who, in the past, erroneously claimed there was "nothing to it." Such, perhaps, is the way of progress!

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Be especially diplomatic in dealing with older persons. Property values, appraisals and price squeezes come into focus. Family members — and your lifestyle — figure prominently. Build on solid structure — or suffer consequences.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may have to take a trip — for a definite purpose. Pleasure will wait — the key now is purpose and dedication. Avoid one who whispers nothing and promises the world. Be grown-up enough to detect sham.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Account is on money and key is to conserve. Make carelessness a stronger. Display sense of responsibility. Deal with those who know meaning of fiscal awareness. Steer clear of persons who expect something for nothing — probably from you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You do some things that you don't particularly enjoy — but what you do is necessary. Know it and proceed. You will ultimately gain prestige as result. Find ways to distribute, advertise. Aries, Libra persons are in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Light is shed in areas which previously attracted only heat. Work procedures come into focus. You may find what has been happening behind the scenes. Another Leo — and an Aquarian — figure in a new start which leads to greater independence for you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis is on old friend who makes respectability. You find that there is account to be paid. You also realize that going it alone at this time is not wise. Rely on individual with experience, especially where law is concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Profession, ability to use natural resources — these are emphasized. Sagittarius, Gemini persons figure prominently. Be versatile without being careless. One in authority may be undergoing personal crisis. Know it and consider it before making demands.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Tear down for purpose of remodeling, rebuilding. Take nothing for granted. Those who promise plenty should be willing to show proof. Aquarius, Leo and another Scorpio are in picture. Long-range view is necessary. Eschew shortcuts and get-rich-quick promotions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Money, investments and inventories figure prominently. Do some checking — find reasons. Reject the superficial. Gemini, Virgo persons are likely to be involved. What was hidden could come to light. Protect financial assets — get legal green light.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Pace is important. Keep it moderate. Avoid extremes. One you can respect makes gesture which is complimentary. Some of your views are vindicated. Avoid "I told you so" remarks. Let others show their hands and reveal their policies. Play own cards close to chest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Much that occurs is behind the scenes — a clandestine meeting is on agenda. Your health, diet, work schedule — these are spotlighted. Be as practical as possible. Avoid jumping to conclusions. You get chance to express opinions to large numbers of persons.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love, creativity, your ability to express your own style — these are emphasized. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently. Avoid playing games with emotions — stakes are high and you could become inextricably involved. Young persons act worldly wise.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY be prepared for more responsibility in December. This has been a year of change and if single, of marriage. You are a teacher, intuitive and willing to share knowledge. You are generous, unorthodox and passionate. Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. (Learn "The Truth About Astrology," Send birthdate (for our survey) and 75 cents to Omarr Booklet, The Lincoln Star, P.O. Box 111, Los Angeles, Calif. 90033. You'll open door to fascinating study and self-revelation!)

San Francisco — Prime time on the evening TV. The poor detective is getting his lumps. Pow! Crash! "OK, wiseguy! Drop it!"

"Get this, Slade. Either you find the killer or turn in your badge!"

The youngest boy sneaked up behind me while I was shaving and put a water pistol in my back.

"Freeze! FBI!"

I said: "Curse it, don't do that! I've nicked myself. Call an ambulance. Get my lawyer. I want to change my will."

He said: "You have a right to remain silent. You can have a lawyer but not to change your will."

Every once in awhile, the moppets quiz me on the state of my possessions.

"How soon will you die, Daddy? Remember, I get the cufflinks. You promised!"

Gloomy days when your children weigh you in for the Grim Reaper.

If you ever get a chance, make a TV pilot. You find out what others think of you.

I wanted to be a detective in the pilot film. "Take it easy, Midge, or I'll put you in stoneliness!"

But no. They wanted to make a travel show.

The director said: "The way I see it, you have a pipe in your mouth. The camera opens on you at the typewriter. You stop typing. Turn to the camera: 'Good evening ladies and gentlemen ...'"

If it wasn't for the money I wouldn't do this kind of work. But moppets need shoes.

I said: "For the love of Pete, I don't smoke a pipe. That's the worst cliché in the world. Next you'll want me to grow a beard."

He said: "Hey, that's a good idea!"

I said: "Maybe I could wear a safari suit."

He said: "Man, keep going! That's beautiful!"

Anyway, we made a turkey that never unfolded its wings.

Everybody said: "Better luck next time."

Like life, friend, there is no next time. Headed for that big harp concert in the land of milk and honey. (I don't eat milk or honey either.)

The children are not high on detective stories. They like "Partridge Family" and "The Brady Bunch" and "Wait Till Your Father Comes Home."

They are wild for "Creature Features." And if any Frankenstein movie is playing, I don't own the TV any more.

The director said: "As I see it, you are standing in front of a globe of the world. You are spinning it. You say: 'Ladies and gentlemen, where shall I go next in my extensive travels?'"

A man put a sheet around my shoulders and began putting makeup powder on my face.

He said: "I don't know what we can do about your hair. Your head is going to look like a full moon."

He drew hair on me. Drew it with an Eagle "Chemi-Sealed" Draughting 314 pencil. Same one we use for editing newspaper copy.

He said: "You really ought to buy a hairpiece."

After that put down. I was a beaten man. I smoked a pipe. Spun the globe. Shaped up and shipped out.

Police Collar Moscow Jews Holding Protest

MOSCOW (AP) — A half-dozen Moscow Jews had just about three minutes of free expression before they were collared and hustled off to a nearby police station.

The Jews, seeking permission to emigrate, lined up under the statue of Yuri Dolgoruky, the city's founder, and unfurled paper banners urging "Freedom for Prisoners of Zion."

The demonstration was broken up by more than 20 uniformed police and civilian auxiliaries wearing red arm bands.

They marched in from behind the demonstrators, snatched and tore the paper banners and man-handled the Jews to police headquarters of the police auxiliary about 50 yards away.

Berkeley Central Shrine To Change

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Events like the Free Speech Movement, the Filthy Speech Movement, Stop the Draft Week demonstrations and the People's Park fight have rattled this university city for a decade.

But whenever microphones fell silent, leaflets blew away and tear gas settled, "Berkeley Central" always remained a permanent shrine to political and social change.

Geographically it encompasses the University of California's Sproul Plaza and perhaps a quarter-mile of adjoining Telegraph Avenue, but it seems a part of neither the city nor the campus. It is an institution.

Even on the most restful summer days in politically stagnant times, people of "Berkeley Central" can't quite forget events here since Mario Savio led a fight for free speech.

"We've seen all the riots, the National Guard and everything," recalled Nellie Bezley as she sold fruit from her stand at Telegraph and Bancroft avenues. "The first time I got tear gassed I thought I'd die, but we learned to keep wet towels to wash our eyes."

She and her husband Gordon operated one of four food stands at the main university entrance seven years ago, but today the middle-aged couple and their dog Funky are joined by some 15 other food carts — many with hot and cold running water and serving everything from Chinese dinners to pretzels.

Nearby the ever-present Hare Krishna devotees bounce up and down, competing for attention with a Bible-shaking preacher and long-haired panhandlers.

Behind them stretches the 30,000-student campus which recently has seen a sharp decline of overt political activity. The last antiwar street riots were in May 1972 after the mining of Haiphong harbor. Last year saw only two peaceful mass sit-ins over the planned phaseout of UC's Criminology Department.

"Berkeley no longer is the mecca for students from the East and elsewhere," said one campus public information officer. "After the Free Speech Movement the heavies wanted to come, but now there's quiet, solid academic work going on here."

From an office looking out on frisbee players and sunbathers in Sproul Plaza, he added, "After the war and the draft were over, there wasn't much to feed the radicals."

Up and down The Avenue, as it is known, are dozens of vendors peddling leather goods, jewelry and other handmade articles from curbside stands and blankets. Some 450 of them have been licensed by the city, lending the street a festive air.

In front of Larry Blake's restaurant — where a food freezer once provided bystanders with refuge from tear gas — a tall, blonde vendor sells leathers and reminisces: "Five years ago, there were only 20 of us, but now there are a lot more vendors. There are a lot more junkies and lots of ripoffs of vendors, too."

Many vendors have turned to police for help despite antipolice sentiment lingering from the pitched battles once waged along the avenue.

"At that time the spirit was different," said Patrolman Jim Macedo, a veteran of six years here. "The war was on and young people faced the draft."

"Rapport with police is a two-way street, and we changed a little bit, too," he added, looking to Patrolman Dave Elliott, who wears a bushy brown natural hairstyle. "It's not cool to hassle. At times they have been ripped off by their own type of people and have had to come to the police."

A half-block off Telegraph Avenue, a solitary university groundskeeper waters "People's Park" where an orgy of community spirit — dancing, gardening and music — created a neighborhood park and eventually led to citywide violence and death.

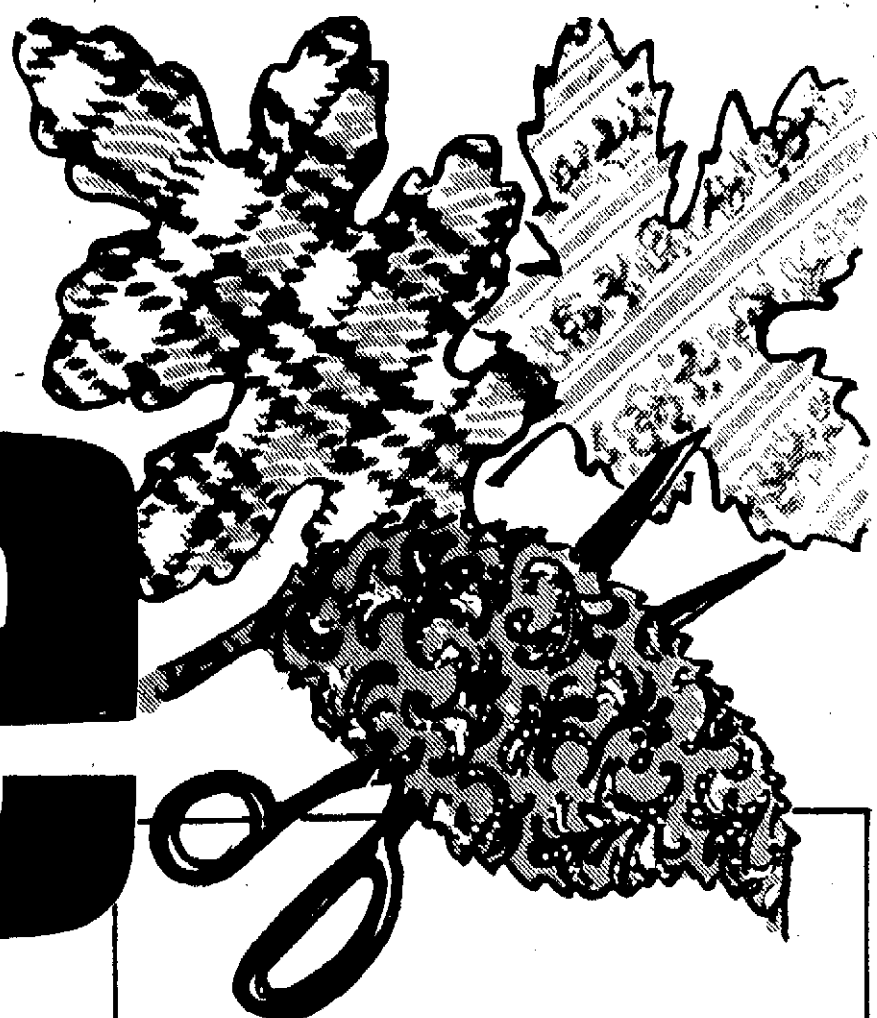

When the university reclaimed its land in May of 1969, rioting spread across the city and 2,000 National Guard troops rolled into town. Dozens of protesters were injured and one man was killed by sheriff's gunfire.

Now, after protests have torn down the fences, the park is open. A small "People's Garden" of vegetables occupies one corner where a basketball court was uprooted by hand. It was planted by students with the university's permission.

"They water their own plants and they still call it 'People's Park,'" the gardener said. "But it's the Regents' property and everybody knows it."

"The police come by here a lot and keep it under surveillance. They want things quiet around here."

Pavement Performers Increasing

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

"My music belongs to all people, and what better way to give it than outside, on the street," said Vincent Taylor as he stood on tiptoe in front of a sparkling steel drum on New York's Fifth Avenue.

He strained, stretched and gyrated his way through a difficult but melodious chord, as curious onlookers "oohed" and "ahed" at the tinkling music he produced from the drum.

Taylor, 29-year-old native of Trinidad, is one of a growing group of entertainers performing on city streets across the nation.

Their reasons for being on the sidewalks are as varied as their acts: chamber music trios, puppeteer, magicians, mimes, painters, tap dancers, jazz, folk and classical musicians and poets.

Some of the pavement performers are students of political science, economics and history. Others are unemployed professional artists who find street entertaining good for picking up business contacts. Most street performers say they earn their living through the sidewalk shows. But some are there to supplement other incomes or to entertain just for the fun of it.

"We just did it for fun because we liked the music and wanted to do it in the streets; that's how this music originated," said Sue Dent of the Merrie England Madrigal Singers in San Francisco. Miss Dent, 22, a music student at Chabot College in Hayward, Calif., said the group collects about $10 per hour on weekends.

John Corthorn, 27, is a master's degree candidate in urban planning at the University of Denver. He plays the guitar and sings folk songs in the Larimer Square vicinity in downtown Denver, making anywhere from $5 to $20 a day.

"I come down when I'm low on money or it's a nice day — usually both," he said. "It's one way of seeing what happens on the street, and besides that, I just like to sing. It's getting to be part of the scene here."

Bearded Jerry Desault, 21, of Concord, N.H., can be found sitting on a green blanket near Copley Square on Boylston Street in Boston playing his flute. In front of him stands a small tin can.

"My only expense is food," he said. "Sincere remarks and sincere smiles make my day." Desault makes about $125 a week, although he attracts fewer people than the jugglers on Boston Common.

Boston, like most cities, has an ordinance against soliciting — no signs or verbal requests for money.

Desault said the police are pretty tolerant of him and other street entertainers so long as sidewalks are not blocked and entertainers do not create nuisances.

But steel drummer Taylor says he's sometimes chased away from desirable spots by New York police when crowds form to listen.

"The police have their moods," said 25-year-old Peter Darmi, a fellow New York performer who plays Handel flute sonatas on Fifth Avenue. "They can walk by a dozen times and then on the 15th time they'll say: 'All right, get out of here.'"

Darmi, a self-taught musician who's been playing for 11 years, said he was "discovered" on the street two years ago by Playboy Records, who gave him and his partner, Matthew Weiner, a contract for an album which never sold.

"I'm not aware of any drive to purge the streets of New York of these people," said a New York Police Department spokesman. "It is low on the priority of enforcement, but it is from time to time enforced."

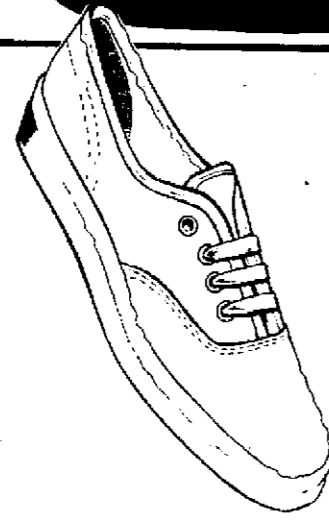

Robert Manny, a flutist in Portland, Ore., was arrested recently for playing in the downtown area. Manny, 33, usually puts a can or his open flute case at the base of his music stand, and stray coins usually end up there. The police said this phenomenon constituted begging and arrested the flutist.

But Manny told the court that he never asks for money, he just plays his flute and lets the coins fall where they may. The district attorney's office had the case dismissed.

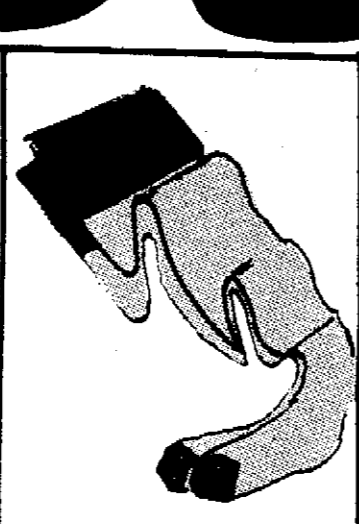

In New Orleans, where street entertainment is as old as the French Quarter itself, police attitudes also are relaxed. Said one officer: "You can walk around with beer cans and open drinks in your hand, and hookers walk around with half their bodies exposed. I don't see anything wrong with a guitar."

Some Told Not To Borrow At All

Chicago (AP) — Household Finance Corp., which traditionally counsels "Never Borrow Money Needlessly," is beginning to tell some prospective customers they're better off not borrowing at all.

HFC says its rate of approving new customers is off by nearly 20 per cent, and there are signs this is the trend throughout the $44 billion-a-year consumer loan industry.

This could hurt lower middle income families, who often use consumer loans to get through economic tight spots.

While officials of HFC, one of the largest firms in the industry, say they have no policy to constrain credit, the approval rate of loans to new customers has gone down from 37 to 30 per cent.

One of the reasons, says HFC vice chairman P. C. Nagle, is that "our standards, because of money costs, have tightened up a bit."

The problem lies in the interest rates finance companies have to pay for money they themselves loan out. The short term rates to the companies have risen to the point where the squeeze is being felt in sharply lower first-half profits.

There are more than 1,000 big and small finance companies operating out of more than 20,000 offices around the nation. Consumers who need extra cash to meet emergency expenses or to consolidate debts are charged interest rates of up to 36 per cent.

That rate depends on the size of the loan and regulations which vary from state to state.

Most borrowers who go to finance companies have annual incomes under $9,000, industry statistics show.

Much of their business is with high-risk customers. Delinquent loans are routinely considered part of their overhead.

If a person can't get a loan through a finance company, he probably can't get a commercial loan through any legitimate means, said Robert Gibson, head of the nonprofit National Foundation for Consumer Credit in Washington.

HFC made more than $64 million last year on its finance operations. First-half profits this year were down by 12 per cent.

"Obviously, the industry is hurting very badly," said Carl Hawver, executive vice president of the National Consumer Finance Association and industry's trade organization.

He said if interest rates stay high for an extended time, loans will be cut back until states allow them to jack up the interest rates on consumer loans.

Gibson said most loan companies have already begun to cut back and he is worried about the possible social implications.

Nagle says persons with low seniority in the automotive and related industries are more likely to be rejected this year because of possible layoffs.

"Maybe after a discussion we'll decide the smart thing today is for the particular customer not to borrow. We don't want to make the loan unless the loan will be repaid," says HFC Chairman G. R. Ellis.

"Take the case, let's say, of a skilled worker who moves from one state to another," says Gibson whose agency has 162 offices around the country. "He's not known locally and may not currently be on the payroll. He may be trying to get a credit rating in the community after establishing fairly good credit back home and needs some money to buy furniture and dishes or something."

"This is the kind of person a small loan company would be willing and want to help. Last

Where does he go? Possibility to illegitimate sources of credit, says Gibson.

"One of our fears is that if a family is unable to obtain credit through a legitimate finance company that deals in high risk loans, their only alternative is to turn to a loan shark, where they put up an arm and a leg for security, or to some form of criminal activity," he says.

A year ago, HFC was paying about 7½ per cent interest for short-term money. In March it was 8½ per cent. At its peak last week it was 11.9 per cent.

"Over a full year, the difference of one full percentage point in the interest rate costs us about $6 million," says Nagle.

All loans gross HFC an average of 20 per cent, said Nagle. The company's overhead, less interest charges it pays, runs to about 10½ per cent. After including the cost of short term money, many finance companies may be operating near the break-even point.

"When our money costs go up to a point you just can't afford to take that risk. You have to stop making loans," said Nagle.

UNL Facility To Specialize In Materials For Deaf

The Midwest Regional Media Center for the Deaf at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will become the Specialized Office for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing on Sept. 1.

Instead of serving as both an instructional center and as a producer of learning materials for the deaf in a 12-state Midwest region, the center will specialize in the production of materials for the deaf for distribution on a nationwide basis.

The Bureau of Education for the Handicapped of the U.S. Office of Education, Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) has designated the NU facility as one of four specialized centers, according to Robert Stepp Jr., director of the center and professor of educational administration. Two of the other nationwide units will produce materials for the blind and mentally handicapped, while the fourth will be in charge of national distribution of materials produced by the other three centers.

Instructional services, including workshops, institutes, and school counseling services, which the media center provided for the region, will be centered in 26 resource centers (13 Regional Resource Centers and 13 Area Learning Resource Centers) created by HEW to provide both diagnostic and educational services for the handicapped. Nebraska will be included for diagnostic and instructional purposes in an eight-state region which will have its main headquarters in Coralville, Iowa.

"The reorganization of programs for the handicapped eliminates the need for separate centers serving the blind, deaf, and mentally handicapped," according to Dr. Stepp. "It will also allow greater specialization in the area of production of materials for the handicapped than was possible under the former organizational structure."

As the Specialized Office of the Deaf and Hard of Hearing, the NU-based facility will search for existing materials for the deaf and make them available to schools for the deaf; it will find materials that need adaptation and revision so that they are suitable for use by the deaf, and it will find areas where existing materials do not exist and produce new materials to fill the void.

Our 54th Year

The Nebraska Medical Association says the major cause of injuries is mishandling materials. It disables about 500,000 workers a year. Most are back injuries and result from improper lifting. There are simple rules for lifting which must be understood and practiced. Feet should be planted firmly, well apart. Squat, with the knees bent, and get a good grip on the object. Keeping the back straight, lift slowly, without jerking, by pushing up with the legs. This permits the strong leg muscles to do the work, rather than the back muscles.

Falls, the second greatest cause of on-the-job injuries, disable almost 400,000 workers a year. Surprisingly enough, just as many falls occur on level ground as from elevated places. The major causes of falls are objects left in the middle of the aisle or on stairs, spilled oil, grease, water, waxed floors, or icy exterior walks. Falls from ladders have permanently disabled many workers. A ladder should be set one foot away for every four feet up to the point of support. Since the rungs are one foot apart, figuring the distance is easy.

Some 260,000 workers are seriously injured each year by falling, moving, or flying objects, in most cases, the injured worker has failed to wear protective equipment.

Computer, Home Link Now Possible

EDITOR'S NOTE: Two-way communications between a central computer and a terminal in the consumer's home is finally a reality. Lorraine Smith reports from Dallas for McGraw-Hill World News.)

By LORRAINE SMITH

Dallas — John and Linda Brown (fictitious names) will leave soon on vacation remarkably free from the usual worries. Their lawn sprinkler will be operated on a present schedule during their two weeks away. Lights in their home will be turned off and on at different times to fool potential burglars.

Should an intruder get into the house, however, a sophisticated security system will notify the police. If there is a sudden rise in temperature in the house, or a strange gas or smoke is detected, it will call the fire department.

The key to these services, and many more, is a slender black box sitting on top of the Brown's television set. It is the home terminal for a two-way cable communication system, and is linked to a central computer.

Besides giving improved reception for a large number of television channels, the unit can handle several alarm systems plus such mundane chores as waking up the Browns in the morning, turning on their coffee pot, or operating other appliances. It also has exotic possibilities such as home shopping by pushbutton, home banking and remote utility meter reading. With it, the Browns may eventually cast public opinion ballots, watch first-run movies or pay-TV, or participate in two-way local education programs.

Gleam Becomes Reality

Once a gleam in the computer scientist's eye, two-way communication between a central computer and home terminals is finally a reality. The first major system was installed last fall at Leisure World, a retirement community developed by the Rossmore Corporation in Mesa, Ariz. In its first stage the Leisure World system offers only medical, fire and burglar alarms and cable TV. But it has the potential for all of the services cited in the Brown scenario.

It has been such a major selling point for homebuyers that this year Rossmore ordered a second system for its new town called Coconut Creek in southeastern Florida.

Another major installation is going in at Flower Mount New Town located near the new Dallas/Fort Worth airport. This community will eventually have a population of 65,000.

In addition to the alarm systems and cable TV, Flower Mount will also provide initially a 24-hour news and weather service originating in a Flower Mount studio.

Several other new towns and planned communities in various stages of development and construction will also have the new system, which is called tocom. The name comes from the first letters of the words total communications.

The system, developed by a small Dallas-area firm called Tocom II Inc., consists of three primary elements. These are a computer-controlled central data system, a bi-directional cable distribution system and terminals in the homes of participants.

Each Home Terminal

Each home terminal has its own unique data identification number and responds with a digitally coded signal when interrogated by the central data system. The home terminal automatically relays replies to such electronic inquiries from the central data system as: Does an alarm condition exist? Is the TV set turned on? Are you watching pay TV? And many more.

The central data system is capable of interrogating, receiving and acting on the responses from as many as 60,000 home terminals every six seconds.

Tocom is not limited to use in total communities. A cable TV company in Florida has interested condominium developers in using Tocom equipment tied into its own cable TV system. One 152-unit condominium complex will have direct ties to police and fire departments and to the nearest hospital.

The computer will be preprogrammed with information concerning the apartment residents for emergency print-out. Any individual with heart trouble, asthma, emphysema, or someone with a serious physical handicap such as a paraplegic, can list this data to warn emergency crews of potential emergency situations and not only save time but lives.

In the Leisure World medical alert warning system there is an alarm installed in each bedroom. Activated by a pull-type switch, it sounds an audible alarm within the home and also requests medical assistance at both the computer center and at Leisure World's 24-hour health watch center. A bedside alarm button with a cord may be plugged into the wall-mounted pull switch in each bedroom for bedridden persons.

Doyle Reviews Mass Transit Needs

By JOEL THORSON
Outstate Nebraska Bureau
Seward — "Somewhere in between no mass transit and total mass transit there is a legitimate need," State Roads Department Director Thomas Doyle said here Tuesday night.

Doyle was commenting at a public hearing in response to a question from Mrs. Betsy Hancock of Lincoln, regarding the department's new role as dispenser of federal funds for mass transit programs.

Omaha is the only part of the state Doyle said, where there is a big need for mass transit, other than inter-city transportation.

Mass transit is "one of the ways we have of maximizing the money we have available," he said. "... we don't oppose mass transit except where it would detract from our highway programs."

The hearing was one of seven (one in each highway district) scheduled jointly by the department and the State Highway Commission to explain the proposed highway construction program for fiscal years 1975-80, and gather public comment on highway priorities.

Much of the comment advocated hard-surface improvements of various gravel roads. On the other hand, several land owners opposed four-lane improvements of existing two-lane highways.

Several Crete spokesmen promoted hard-surfacing of Highway 103 north of Crete, giving trucks access to I-80 from new Crete industries.

A similar plea came from Richard Reinke of Reinke Manufacturing in Deshler who asked for paving of Hwy. 5 between Davenport and Deshler to accommodate his company's projected 100,000 tons per year of truck traffic over that gravel highway.

Several people urged hard-surfacing of the road linking Beaver Crossing with the hospital in Friend.

Land owners threatened by four-lane widenings of U.S. 77 south of the Crete corner and U.S. 73-75 in Cass Co. questioned the need for those projects. And Mrs. John Mackenzie of Milford questioned the value of turning U.S. 6 just north of Milford into a "speedway" by paving the shoulders.

Bill Peterson, chairman of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce Committee on Metropolitan Streets and Highways, noted that "the Lincoln area did not have any major projects in the department's fiscal 1974 or 1975 programs" and therefore should have priority in:

- grading, structures and surfacing for four lanes on west Cornhusker Hwy. from I-80 to I-80;
- construction of an urban section, with median islands, of Hwy. 2 from the vicinity of 14th to Old Cheney intersection;
- functional design hearing and commencement of engineering for the Lincoln West Bypass.

Twenty-fourth Legislative District candidate Doug Bereuter declared that "a blanket 55 miles per hour speed limit" penalizes Nebraska disproportionately because its people face greater distances in making a living than do people in many other areas.

Doyle agreed, indicating support for a 60 m.p.h. limit.

Industrial Spies Sent To Prison

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — A German engineer and his wife were sent to prison Tuesday for carrying out industrial espionage in West German firms for the Soviet Union.

Rudolf Buechner, 41, was jailed for 34 months for spying on his employer, Degussa, a chemicals and precious metals firm.

His wife Gundrung, 38, received a 21-month sentence for collecting classified information while working at AEG, an electronics and communications company.

Fire Damage To Warehouse 'Considerable'

A fire in the Latch Bros. warehouse at 1123 P resulted in "considerable" damage to the building and its contents Tuesday afternoon, according to District Fire Chief Neil McPherson.

McPherson said the blaze, which took 10 minutes to bring under control, damaged some empty boxes which were to be thrown out and caused extensive smoke damage to the structure.

The cause of the fire is still under investigation.

Lincoln High Student Wounded By Young Robber With Knife

A Lincoln High School student was treated for knife cuts and released from Lincoln General Hospital after being assaulted on the sidewalk outside the school Monday, according to police reports.

Police said James Parrish, 14, of 1401 R, reported that he was outside the building between classes when he was approached by another youth who demanded his money.

Parrish told police that he told the youth he had no money and would not give him any even if he did.

According to reports, the youth cut Parrish twice on the left arm and once each on the chest, neck and face.

The assailant is described as a 16- to 17-year-old Mexican-American male, 6 feet tall, weighing 180 to 190 pounds.

Rep Hugh L. Carey captured the Democratic nomination for governor of New York Tuesday night, and Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida led a parade of nine governors winning renomination as incumbents scored easy victories in most races of the year's biggest primary election day.

Besides Askew, the Democratic gubernatorial winners included Marvin Mandel of Maryland, Patrick J. Lucey of Wisconsin, Wendell Anderson of Minnesota and Thomas P. Salmon of Vermont.

Republican Govs Francis W. Sargent of Massachusetts, Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire and John Vanderhoof of Colorado ran well ahead of primary rivals, while GOP Gov. Malcolm Wilson of New York was unopposed.

And the only incumbent senator with primary opposition, Sen. Republican Charles McC Mathias Jr. of Maryland, ran far ahead of his only opponent, perennial candidate Ross Z. Pierpont.

Baltimore Councilwoman Barbara Mikulski and former prisoner of war Bernard Talley led the 11-candidate Democratic field.

In the New York gubernatorial contest, Carey, a Brooklyn congressman with strong labor backing, scored heavily throughout New York City to defeat former offtrack betting boss Howard J. Samuels, running with organization backing in his fourth unsuccessful bid for governor.

Carey will be joined on the Democratic ticket by state Sen. Mary Anne Krupsak of upstate Canajoharie, who won a three-way battle for lieutenant governor to become the first woman in New York to be nominated for statewide office.

And former U.S. Atty Gen. Ramsey Clark, a transplanted Texan, easily won the Democratic nomination for senator. He will run in November against veteran Republican Sen. Jacob K. Javits, unopposed for renomination for a fourth term.

Besides Javits, three other senators won renomination without opposition, Republicans Barry Goldwater of Arizona and Peter D. Onofre of Colorado, and Democrat Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin.

In Colorado, Gary Hart, the manager of Sen. George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign, led a three-man field in the Democratic Senate contest.

In Florida, Askew swamped three opponents in the Democratic primary. His November opponent is Republican Jerry Thomas, a conservative former Democrat.

In Massachusetts, Sargent easily defeated his conservative GOP challenger, Carroll P. Sheehan.

In the Democratic race, former state Rep. Michael S. Dukakis defeated state Atty Gen. Robert H. Quinn.

In Maryland, where Mandel's margin over three challengers was substantial but less than anticipated, a surprise appeared to be in the making in the GOP gubernatorial race.

Rep. Lawrence W. Hogan, the first Republican member of the House Judiciary Committee to support impeachment of former President Richard M. Nixon, trailed former state Sen. Louise Gore.

In the District of Columbia, which is electing its first mayor this year, appointed Mayor Walter Washington led in the Democratic primary against his challenger, attorney Clifford L. Alexander Jr. The nomination is tantamount to election in heavily Democratic Washington.

In Florida, drugstore millionaire Jack Eckerd easily won the Republican primary for the seat of retiring Sen. Edward Gurney, defeating Public Service Commissioner Paula Hawkins.

In the Democratic race, Rep. Bill Gunther led the 11-man field but seemed likely to face an Oct. 1 runoff against either state Sen. Richard Pettigrew or Secretary of State Richard Stone.

Washington (UPI) — The planet Jupiter apparently is a surprisingly hot, spinning ball of liquid hydrogen that in some respects resembles the sun, a panel of scientists reported Tuesday.

And the Great Red Spot that has mystified astronomers gazing at Jupiter's colorful clouds for more than a century seems to be a 25,000-mile-wide hurricane.

These findings are part of a new picture of Jupiter that is emerging from nine months of analysis of the measurements and photographs radioed back from the Pioneer 10 spacecraft that passed within 81,000 miles of Jupiter last December.

Project scientist John H. Wolfe said one of the most startling discoveries was that Jupiter, like the sun, is generating high energy radiation. And like the sun, Jupiter is mostly made up of hydrogen and it is hot.

Dr. Andrew Ingersoll, a meteorologist from the California Institute of Technology, said the Great Red Spot appears to be a massive, swirling updraft of atmosphere resembling a terrestrial hurricane.

Combined Rally-Box Social Begins United Fund Drive

It had all the trappings of a combination pep rally-box social but the 1975 Lincoln-Lancaster United Fund campaign was kicked off in grand fashion Tuesday.

Sporting nontraditional headgear, the Salvation Army's Ross Zarfass directed the University of Nebraska-Lincoln pep band, which played such tunes as the "Fight Song" and the "Beer Barrel Polka."

and representatives of the 25 community agencies funded partially through the campaign.

All was designed to generate enthusiasm for the campaign which seeks to raise $1,430,206. The 1975 goal is up $141,231 over last year's goal.

During the brief ceremony, a 26% increase in employee donations was reported by the eight firms participating in the pilot campaign.

Pilot firms were Lincoln Equipment Company, Magee's, the Lincoln Journal-Star, Brandeis, Union Bank, Mid-America Webpress, Sealrite Manufacturing and Peat, Marwick & Mitchell.

E. Ross Martin is campaign chairman.

Other leaders were John F. Wells, vice chairman, Gordon Kuhn, business, Robert S. Hinds, special gifts, Lee Liggett, government, Paul Schorr III, Impact '75, Anne Campbell, education, Wilson B. Garnett, major firms, and Jackie Lewis, neighborhoods.

City-County Health Board OKs Plan To Improve Dental Care

By CINDY JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

A proposal, which would strengthen the dental health services of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Department, was approved by the members of the Lincoln-Lancaster County Health Board at that group's monthly meeting Tuesday night.

Drawn up by Dr. E. D. Lyman, health department director, and Dr. Eugene S.

Merchant, assistant dean of the University of Nebraska College of Dentistry, the proposal would expand the existing city-county dental health care program in education and clinical services.

In general, the "dental health educational program will be directed toward the total public," the proposal states.

Services Reserved
"Clinic services will be reserved for those on welfare who will not seek private care for whatever reason, or for those few whose needs the private sector cannot or will not meet."

The management of the dental health division would be carried out by a qualified dentist who would assume the post of full-time director of dental health.

The director, who, under the proposal would receive an annual salary of $27,500, would direct and coordinate the clinical and educational programs of the dental health division.

N-Bombs In Storage Could Be Captured

WASHINGTON (AP) — American nuclear bombs stored overseas could fall easy prey to attacks by terrorist groups and could be held hostage if revolts caused changes in the host governments, Congress was told Tuesday.

Adm. Gene R. LaRocque, U.S. Navy, Ret., said also that the overkill capacity of the Soviet Union and the United States has so increased that the combined raw megatonnage of both nations is equal to 12 million bombs of the type that destroyed Hiroshima.

LaRocque, a former Navy fleet commander and strategic planner who now heads the Center for Defense Information, urged that bombs now stored overseas be brought home and that steps be taken to prevent the threatened widespread proliferation of nuclear weaponry among other nations.

Testifying before a Senate atomic energy subcommittee, LaRocque said that U.S. nuclear warheads and bombs stored at such countries as Greece, Turkey, and South Korea are protected by concrete igloos and guarded by "relatively few men."

"A well planned, well executed terrorist attack could easily capture our nuclear weapons and a fast plane or helicopter could get them out of the country just as easily," he said.

LaRocque gave these statistics on the relative nuclear positions of the United States and the Soviet Union.

—The United States has three times as many strategic nuclear bombs as the Soviet Union, 7,940 compared to 2,600.

—The United States has a capacity of hitting every Soviet city of over 100,000 population with 38 bombs while the Soviets can hit every American city of that size with 11 bombs.

—The United States can destroy more individual targets and the Soviet Union has bigger bombs with two times as much raw megatonnage, but the destructive capacity of each country is about equal. —Since the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks began, the United States is adding four nuclear bombs or warheads each day while the Soviet union is adding one a day.

The council rejected Councilman Steve Rosenblatt's proposal to place the lottery question on the November ballot in a public referendum.

Mayor Edward Zornsky made a last minute plea to the council.

"Government in our time has become entirely too dictatorial and it's about time to let the people make some decisions," Zornsky said.

Sinatra Denies Involvement In Fistfights

Los Angeles (UPI) — Frank Sinatra, who was scheduled to go on trial Tuesday in a $2.5 million civil suit brought by a Salt Lake City man, denied in a deposition he had been involved in a series of fist fights over 35 years.

The deposition, taken in San Francisco Aug. 30, was filed in federal court.
 Frank J. Weinstock, an insurance executive, alleged Sinatra's associates beat him up in Palm Springs in 1973 after a

 allegedly made advances to Weinstock's wife on behalf of Sinatra.

"I have never in my life purposely provoked anybody into any fight with me — never — for the single reason that in my kind of life I just could not win," he said in the deposition.

"Even if you win, you lose,"
 he said.

Courageous Captures Opening Heat

NEWPORT, R. I. (AP) — Alan Bond, who hopes to take the 123-year-old America's Cup to yachting country in Australia, had only one complaint after his first defeat Tuesday.

"If they keep yelling on the other boat, I'm going to protest all the way to the top," he said at a news briefing that followed the opening race in the best-of-seven series for international yachting's most coveted prize.

The American defender, Courageous, proved herself a vastly superior light-air boat as she walloped Bond's Aussie challenger, Southern Cross, by a shocking four minutes and 54 seconds.

Bond accused Dennis Connor, co-helmsman aboard Courageous with skipper Ted Hood, of shouting loudly as the two 12-meter yachts maneuvered around the starting line.

"He was yelling, 'false start, false start,' around there, and if he does it again, we'll protest," Bond promised.

The gold-colored Australian boat came into the series touted as the most formidable challenger the Americans have had to face since the first race in the series in 1951.

But Southern Cross was never in the race after Courageous got the jump at the start of the 24.3-mile course and she was outdistanced on all points of sail.

"We're not tired, or discouraged," Bond said. "Our defeat resulted purely from human error, and we won't make the same mistakes in Wednesday's race."

The start was delayed by fog on Rhode Island Sound for almost two hours. Courageous and her opponent measured each other before Courageous made her first key move at the starting line that set up the victory.

The elapsed time of the race was 4 hours, 20 minutes—considered very good in light of the conditions.

The start was delayed almost two hours because of fog and lack of wind. By the time the governing committee of the New York Yacht Club signalled the 12-meter boats to begin the race, the fog had disappeared and the wind had increased to about eight knots.

But even as Tuesday's bad weather abated, there was threatening news from the weather forecasters. Elaine, the fifth tropical storm of the season, was reported moving up the coast toward New England, bearing strong wind and heavy seas.

The storm could be a factor later in the week, unless it stays far enough off shore.

The long, lean 12-meter craft, like the Courageous and Southern Cross, have raced in winds up to 30 knots, but that is about the limit for them.

Her white glistening in the spotty sunlight, Courageous won an extremely close start—the official margin was two seconds—and headed up the initial windward leg with an advantage she increased throughout the race.

Adroitly holding her line so as to take advantage of whatever wind shifts there were, and covering Southern Cross' moves to upstage her, the American boat rounded the first marker with a 34-second advantage.

At the end of the second, or "reaching" leg, she had built her margin to 1 minute, 24 seconds, and added another 11 seconds on the third leg going downwind.

By then, the wind had dropped to about five knots and the race developed into a battle of tactics and sail choices between the crews.

America's Cup defender, Courageous (top) and the Australian challenger, Southern Cross, get into a luffing match about 30 seconds before the start of their first race.

Brock Snaps Steal Record

By United Press International "Larcenous Lou" Brock of St. Louis broke the modern major league single season stolen base record with Nos. 104 and 105 Tuesday night, but his speed was outdone by the power of Mike Schmidt, who drove in four runs with a homer and a pair of doubles to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-2 victory over the Cardinals.

Brock's thefts came in the first and seventh innings to break the previous record of 104 stolen bases set by Maury Wills of the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1962. Brock's first stolen base of the night was No. 739 of his 13-year career, breaking Max Carey's National League career mark of 738. Both of Brock's stolen bases came after he cracked sharp singles to left off righthander Dick Ruthven.

In both cases the count was 0-1 on batter Ron Hunt when Brock was off and running. In the first the throw by catcher Bob Boone went into centerfield for an error and Brock went to third to trigger a two-run inning. When Brock beat Boone's throw in the seventh play was halted as the Cardinals poured out of the dugout and the bullpen to mob the 35-year-old team outfielder at second base. Brock was awarded the second base bag after each steal.

Brock also got another chance for a stolen base in the ninth when he reached on an error, but he was cut down by Boone in an attempt to steal No. 106. It was the 29th time Brock has been caught stealing this year.

In other games Los Angeles blanked Atlanta 1-0, Cincinnati beat San Diego 5-2, Pittsburgh trounced Chicago 12-4, Montreal defeated New York 6-4, and San Francisco edged Houston 6-5 in 11 innings.

Don Sutton stopped Atlanta on just four hits and recorded his fifth shutout of the year while hurling Los Angeles over the Braves. The Dodgers' run was scored on three consecutive singles in the second inning. Steve Garvey and Willie Crawford rapped out base hits against Braves' starter and loser Carl Morton and Ron Cey followed with a single to drive in Garvey.

Pete Rose rapped out a pair of doubles and a single to lead the Reds past San Diego behind the six-hit pitching of Don Gullett.

The triumph was the 16th of the season against 10 losses for Gullett, who struck out 11, and left the Reds 3 1/2 games behind Los Angeles in the National League West. Rose's hits were three of 12 the Reds collected off four pitchers.

Richie Hebner, collecting four hits for the second straight day, paced a 20-hit assault against five Chicago pitchers to lead the Pirates to an easy triumph. Ken Brett, who went the first six innings, singled the first three times up in picking up his 13th win against seven losses, including his third straight over the Cubs.

The rampaging Pirates collected 18 of their hits in the first 4 1/3 innings, when they scored all their runs to wrap up the contest.

Spartan Girls Start By Beating Papillion

Lincoln East beat Papillion, 9-15, 16-14, 16-14, Tuesday afternoon at the Spartans' Gym to open the girls volleyball season for both teams.

Sue Luedtke with 12 points and Kris Hermanson with 11 paced the Capital City team's win.

Lincoln Native Kane Now Oregon Starter

By BOB OWENS

Nebraska wins quite a few recruiting battles for the top high school football talent around the nation, but one the Cornhuskers lost could come back to haunt them Saturday in the season opener against Oregon in Memorial Stadium.

Dressed in the emerald green and lemon yellow uniform of the visiting Ducks and starting at running back will be Lincoln native Richard James (Rick) Kane.

Kane is a 6-foot, 193-pound sophomore who prepped at Amador Valley High School in the Pleasanton, Calif., area.

Upon graduation, he was considered the best high school running back to come out of the East Bay area in the last decade.

It was Rick's Lincoln ties, as much as his high school record, that brought him to the attention of Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne just after Osborne succeeded Bob Devaney as head coach.

The NU staff studied films and liked what they saw. Rick visited Lincoln, where he was born Nov. 12, 1954 and where he lived until about seven or eight years ago.

"We worked pretty hard on him," Osborne said Tuesday. "He has good speed and balance. We were very disappointed when we didn't get him."

Osborne recalled that Kane signed a Big Eight tender with Colorado before finally choosing Oregon where he is a physical education major.

Kane's mother attended NU where she received both her bachelor's and master's degrees and then taught in various Lincoln public schools for several years.

Her family was from the Dwight-Seward area. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fiala, still live in Lincoln. Rick's father is an Iowa native, but moved to Lincoln where he was employed by the Burlington Railroad before moving the family to California.

Kane had an outstanding rookie season for the Ducks, ending up the year with 430 yards in 90 carries for a 4.8-yard average. He gained 138 yards in the finale against rival Oregon State and was voted Oregon's player of the game.

At the close of the season he won the Len Casanova Award as the Ducks' top rookie performer.

He's regarded a very touch runner in short-yardage situations with a nose for the end zone. He'll be the "dive" back in Oregon's Veer-T offense with Don Reynolds as the "pitch" back, but his coach Don Ready says he's capable of playing either spot with equal ability.

Kane has been bothered in pre-season workouts with a groin pull, but he's expected to be at full strength for Nebraska.

As a high school senior he rushed for 1,470 yards in 172 carries for an 8.5-yard average. He also scored 24 touchdowns and passed for two. That means it's conceivable Oregon has the threat of the halfback pass, one of the football's toughest plays to defend.

In high school, he also was a sprinter on the track team and was a member of his school's mile relay team which was clocked in 3:23.3.

Knights Tennis Team Termed Powerhouse

By Randy York

Prep Sports Editor

In the true sense of the word, Lincoln Southeast can be classified a powerhouse in tennis.

That's especially true this year, considering Southeast coach George Eisele is rebuilding and still probably has the best team in the Capital City.

Tennis has provided Southeast with a powerful athletic tradition under the guidance of Eisele, a McPherson (Kan.) College graduate in his seventh season as the Knights' head coach.

Following another state runnerup finish to Creighton Prep last year, Eisele indeed faced a rebuilding job. After all, his squad is dominated by sophomores and juniors.

But if inexperience was to hinder Southeast's bid for more Trans-Nebraska Conference and state honors this fall, it hasn't shown yet.

The Knights edged a strong East team, 3-2, Monday night. East owns an equally prestigious 3-2 dual triumph over solid championship contender Lincoln High.

Therefore, Southeast at least rates the early line edge to repeat its Trans-Nebraska championship and looms the team to beat in the first Eastern I-80 Conference meet in October.

Southeast also owns dual wins of 9-0 over Columbus and 9-0 over Papillion during the early season. The Knights can gauge their success more accurately after competing in the Fremont Invitational Saturday and facing Lincoln High in a dual next Tuesday.

Eisele considers junior Randy Johnson one of the best tennis players in the city and state. East's Pete Allman and Lincoln High's Larry Rugg are other individual standouts in Capital City ranks.

Letterman Mark Kramer and Jim Perry supply Southeast with impressive depth. Sophomores Tim Holroyd, Doug Henkle, Randy Dawson and Rick Lange also have impressed Eisele.

East coach Bill North predicts a winning season with "tremendous improvement expected during the season. We will be a strong contender in the city, conference and state."

Improvement has been so rapid, according to North, that "there is no limit to what our players can accomplish."

Allman and junior letterman Bradd Way key East's hopes. Underclassmen Terry Stivins, Ron Robinson, Bob Mulvaney and Ross Samson also show promise.

First-year Lincoln High coach Doug Haave, a Nebraska graduate, is pleased with his team's competitive desire.

Fellow junior lettermen Gerd Anderson and Max Brandt join Rugg as the Links' top three players. Mitch Hrdlicka has moved up from reserve status and is the most improved player

Kicking Teams To Stay Same

Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne expects to have the same specialty team members for kickoffs and punts at home as on the road this season.

"We were hurt last year when we had to make changes for our road games," Osborne said.

"We opened with three home games. Then when we had our first conference game on the road at Missouri, travel squad restrictions forced us to leave some of the kickoff team specialists at home.

"Missouri returned two Nebraska kickoffs a total of 91 yards.

"I'm sure there is value in having the same people covered downfield at all times," Osborne said.

"We could be helped some this year because teams will be allowed a 55-man traveling on the team, according to Haave. Seniors Alan Fen and Rick Osborn have demonstrated valuable leadership roles, adds Haave.

Inexperience is Northeast's major setback. Mike Schmidt, the Rockets' No. 1 player last season, returns. So does senior Rich Barclay. But first-year Northeast coach Jim Rathe must develop some younger players for the Rockets to compete. He has six junior and 14 sophomore prospects with which to work.

Second-year Pius X coach Mike Schmidt expects good things to materialize this season with an upgraded schedule and a wealth of returning talent.

Four Thunderbolt lettermen — junior Casey Lien, seniors Kelly McGovern and Steve Schiefelbein and sophomore Tom Sweeney — have shown solid improvement.

"My job," believes Schmidt, "is to keep their attitude tough and their morale high. We expect a successful season."

Debus Helps Alliance Break 19-Year Scottsbluff Jinx

By RANDY YORK

Prep Sports Editor

Two decades is a long time to look for the key to beating Scottsbluff. But Alliance finally found the right answer to a leaky defense — reach down to the Class C ranks for the son of a plumber.

Alliance came up with linebacker Brian Debus when his father moved the family's plumbing business from Morrill last summer. Debus had helped lead Morrill to a final top 16 Class C football rating as a sophomore last year.

He keyed Alliance to a 12-7 come-from-behind win over the Bluffs last Friday night. It ended 19 years of Alliance frustration in the series and netted Debus The Sunday Journal and Star's first prep Player of the Week award this season.

Although first-year Alliance coach Brad Smith would like to nominate any number of Alliance's 38 varsity players for Player of the Week, he concedes Debus probably deserves it most.

The 5-10, 185-pound middle linebacker was credited by Alliance statisticians with 14 unassisted tackles, six assists and a fumble recovery.

Smith hopes the win will supply the tonic to turn Alliance's football program in the right direction. The Bulldogs have experienced three consecutive poor seasons, including a winless one last year.

Others who will receive Player of the Week cards include:

Sam Yawell, Lincoln East — Junior fullback's three touchdowns, including an 85-yard kickoff return late in the third quarter, propelled Spartans to 28-13 win over Omaha Gross.

Doug Remshek, David City Aquinas — Senior fullback-linebacker gained 120 yards on 24 carries, scored a touchdown and led his team in tackles in 40-0 romp past Seward.

Dave Friedli, Milford — Six-two, 189-pound offensive and defensive tackle was in on 15 stops and blocked a punt as Milford held Pawnee City to 39 total yards in 38-0 win.

David Day, Grand Island — Middle guard broke through Kearney's defense to block a punt in the last three minutes. Islanders needed to cover only five yards after the block to score game-winning touchdown in 12-7 win.

Greg Suetter, Ord — Senior halfback rushed for 198 yards on 20 carries and scored a touchdown in team's 24-14 mastery of fellow Class B power Columbus Scouts.

Tom Vering, Fremont Bergen — Senior 1-back (6-2, 195) rushed for 188 yards on 28 carries, scored three touchdowns, kicked three extra points and had 12 tackles at linebacker in Bergen's 27-8 win over Boys Town.

Kevin Church, Morris — Defensive end was the ringleader in forcing seven Nebraska City fumbles, enabling Titans to register impressive 24-7 triumph.

Steve Gard, Omaha Roncalli — He caught 18-yard touchdown pass, a two-point conversion pass and caught two more passes for 34 yards in other scoring drive to lead former Omaha Rummel school to major 15-14 upset of Creighton Prep.

Dick Pike, Ashland — Had an 85-yard kickoff return and a 64-yard run for touchdowns in team's 28-13 conquest of Wahoo.

Doug Long, Alma — Rushed for 108 yards on 19 carries, scored a touchdown, completed two passes for 55 yards, had 11 tackles and punted for 42-yard average in team's 20-14 win over favored Oxford.

Darryl Nelson, Osceola — Senior safety had eight tackles, an interception and an 85-yard punt return touchdown in Class C club's win over Genoa.

Lyle Johnson, Hampton — Junior defensive back had four unassisted tackles, 12 assists, two fumble recoveries, an interception and three blocked punts while playing with a broken finger to lead Hampton to its 20th straight victory — longest win streak in the state

Bengals Release Ex-Husker White

Cincinnati (AP) — The Cincinnati Bengals slumped down to their 47-player limit Tuesday by waiving seven players, including fourth-round draft pick Darryl White.

White had been a standout offensive tackle for Nebraska where he was a second-team All-America choice last season.

FOOTBALL

Glen Holloway, a veteran offensive guard, was traded by the Chicago Bears to the Cleveland Browns for an undisclosed draft choice.

The Bears also released six players including defensive back Joe Blahak of Nebraska.

The New York Jets placed 14 players on waivers and put veteran wide receiver Margene Adkins on the injured reserve list. Two of the players cut were, center Bill Wyman of Texas, and running back Joe Wylie of Oklahoma.

The Portland Storm of the WFL signed quarterback Pete Beathard, who is presently on his option year with the Kansas City Chiefs of the NFL.

Beathard, who said he expected to be put on waivers "at any time" by the Chiefs, is expected to be in uniform when the Storm meets the New York Stars Wednesday.

University of Iowa football coach Bob Cummings tabbed senior Rob Flick as the starting quarterback for Saturday's season opener against Michigan.

San Francisco 49ers' quarterback Steve Spurrier underwent shoulder surgery recently but may be able to play the rest of the season.

The NFL said it would allow clubs to put a record 47 players in uniform for regular season and playoff games this year, an increase of seven from the 40 allowed in recent seasons.

World Football League consultant Mickey Cox and Mayor Calhoun Allen confirmed negotiations were underway to move the new league's money-short and winless Detroit franchise to Shreveport, La.

Allen said the announcement could be made this week and the team could play in Shreveport Oct. 2 against the Houston Texans.

Other elements of the shift reportedly included big money job offers to South Carolina coach Paul Dietzel and Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw.

Running back Tommy Reamon of the Florida Blazers was named the WFL player of the week for his performance in the Blazers' 17-15 victory over the New York Stars.

Reamon, a Missouri graduate, ran for 179 yards on 33 carries and scored one touchdown as the Blazers took over first place in the Eastern Division.

Wills Lauds Brock

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "My hat's off to him," Maury Wills said Tuesday night after his single season record of 104 stolen bases was surpassed by Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals, but the former Los Angeles Dodger took the news with mixed emotions.

Brock stole two bases at St. Louis in a game against Philadelphia for a new major league mark of 105.

Wills, who set his record as the Dodgers' shortstop in 1962, said he was not surprised that Brock broke the record but he was surprised it happened so soon after he retired.

"I never thought anyone would approach the record this soon, probably not in my lifetime," said Wills who retired after the 1972 season after 14 years in the major leagues.

"I'm not going to say records are made to be broken, for me to say that is very wishy-washy."

"I just feel that was my record, I was very proud of it. It is very much a part of me, a part of my identification."

"I don't think anyone looks forward to seeing his own record broken."

The slightly-built Wills picked up the nickname "Mouse" when he stole bases in Dodger Stadium to cries of "Go Maury, Go Maury."

His 104 bases bested 96 stolen by Ty Cobb in 1915.

Wills admitted he "went through a few mixed emotions" when Brock went over the 70 mark earlier in the season.

"I was hoping he wouldn't but once he got around 80 it became very obvious."

Wills added, "Where I never hoped he would, I never wished him any 'tough luck.'"

Said Wills, "In some ways the record was more difficult for Lou than it was for me. At the time I broke Cobb's record everyone was home run conscious and pitchers weren't up on keeping runners close to base."

But after 1962, which sort of revolutionized baseball, pitchers became more informed on how to keep an outstanding stealer close to base and how to keep them from getting a good jump."

Maury said "I felt like I was a part of what Lou was doing because before 1962 major league baseball was involved with the big inning, the home run, and after that other clubs started looking at the Dodgers to see what they were doing with speed and they began to use more of a running game."

He said there are "several players around" with the ability to steal more than 100 bases in a season, but to steal that many bases "it's a matter of everything falling into place."

As for Brock and the new record, Wills says the Cardinal runner could boost the mark by another 10 before the season ends.

"I talked to him about three weeks ago and he thinks he might get as many as 115," Wills said.

"I would have to say my hat is off to him. Lou Brock has proven himself a very prolific base stealer."

Terry To Seek Last Tango In Lincoln

By ERIC KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

Terrytown (AP) — On a flight from Lincoln to Scottsbluff via Omaha, a Scottsbluff resident says "when old Terry Carpenter was in there they used to have a 727 for a direct flight."

Terry hasn't promised Scottsbluff a direct 747 flight, but he wants his last tango in Lincoln, and he says he wants to run the place when he gets there.

Carpenter is running a writen campaign for the legislature against Scotts Bluff County Commissioner William E. Nichol and Mitchell farmer Ben Wilson. Terry vowed he would leave politics after losing his bid for the Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor last spring, but he has never let old positions stand in the way of new opportunities.

Carpenter has announced that, if elected to the legislature, he will seek the chairmanship of the Budget Committee.

The legend says that Terry plays cards with a marked deck so he can tell if anyone is cheating. The hundreds of millions of dollars channeled through the Budget Committee appears to him as a new challenge.

Carpenter is not opposed to spending money. He says the state might have to increase spending if the economy turns toward depression.

The University of Nebraska is worried that it had better not suggest any inadequate programs for its panhandle station, or the University of Nebraska-Scottsbluff as Terry thinks of it. "Or for anywhere else," Terry adds.

Terry wants to build a veterinary college and he wants it in Scottsbluff. He also wants more money for the technical community colleges.

Carpenter discussed his views in an interview with The Associated Press at his office in Terrytown, the community which bears his name.

The state Supreme Court decision striking down the one-mill property tax for the technical community colleges came as no surprise to Carpenter. "Ziebarth (Democratic congressional candidate Wayne Ziebarth, and I knew the bill was unconstitutional when we wrote it."

Carpenter said he pushed the unconstitutional bill through because junior college and technical school administrators feared they would lose local control of the schools if there was no local tax money involved.

Carpenter said state Sen. Jules Burbach was wrong when he said the university would trample the technical community colleges when they came to the legislature for money.

"Burbach knows better than that."

Because the technical community colleges are spread across the state in many legislative districts, Carpenter said, "they've got more muscle, if they'll use it, than the university. The university is scared to death."

Carpenter also said some people were concerned that the new State Aid to Education Bill would give the legislature more control of public schools.

"And they're damn right."

Terry doesn't believe in local control of schools "because 1 1/2 per cent of the local people control it."

Terry Carpenter

Terry wants the state to take over Pershing College in Beatrice and he wants to expand the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

He said he wants to send any Nebraskan to college who can meet the requirements, regardless of financial resources.

He considers a J. James Exon-Gerald Whelan victory a foregone conclusion.

He also thinks Exon will run for some higher office before his second term as governor ends.

Carpenter is pleased because "at least he's not again going to be governor."

Carpenter thinks an Exon-Whelan victory will hurt the Democratic party.

He said Whelan, a partisan Democrat presiding over the legislature, will make the unicameral more partisan.

He said Exon could swing a few Republicans on most votes, but the Republican majority would be more militant if a Democrat were presiding as lieutenant governor.

Carpenter said Exon could find himself facing a veto-proof legislature.

Terry supports Republican Paul Douglas for attorney general. He said Democratic candidate Frank Morrison didn't do anything but "shake hands, make speeches and eat food" when he was governor.

He said Exon's administration has about the same record "but everybody thinks he's the answer to the Lord's Prayer."

"This state doesn't have any imaginative leadership as far as I am concerned," Carpenter said.

He predicted that Sens. Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska were through.

Carpenter said he was sure that there were people who didn't want him back in the legislature. "But they are offset by people who would like me to come back."

"I cut both ways. I'm never on one static side."

Carpenter, at 74, is beginning to accept that his death is near. "I might die before you leave this room." But he said he would resign from the legislature if he became incompetent.

If he is not elected, or if he dies, he is not sure who would replace him as uncrowned sovereign of the legislature. "It's pretty hard to come across a guy who is as crazy as I am."

"Nobody will put in the work and get themselves out front to take the shooting because they will see what happened to Carpenter."

Carpenter gave this rundown on his possible successors:

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha: "He has the ability, but he concentrates too much on racial issues."

Sen. John Decamp of Neligh: "He could, except for his physical appearance. He looks like a boy."

Sen. Loran Schmit of Belwood: "But Schmit is into so damn many things."

Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha: "Has a tremendous amount of ability, if he would get rid of things that are completely impractical."

Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln: "Hardly anyone realizes what he has done for the legal system and the county courts."

Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha: "He could do it if he wanted to. I don't know how much Mahoney wants to work."

County Denies Claims, Collects Taxes

Four claims for $223 by three county vendors were denied Tuesday by Lancaster County commissioners due to delinquent taxes owed by the vendors.

County Clerk Carl Hartman said he and County Treasurer Frank Golden had set up a system where claims are checked against the delinquent tax list each week before presenting them to the board.

He said these were the first four and asked the board to provide the necessary directives for the treasurer to apply the money to the delinquent taxes and so inform the vendors.

The new system was set up as a result of information contained within the state auditor's report noting that the county had failed to comply with the law in allowing claims by individuals with delinquent personal property taxes.

The law provides that delinquent personal tax must be withheld from the amount of any claim filed by a firm or individual having such delinquency.

Hartman said that each of the three vendors involved in Tuesday's claims owed taxes in excess of the claims.

In other action, the board, like citizens with an avenue of input into the community planning process.

The bylaws, unless rejected by the City Council or County Board, are automatically approved.

The rejection by both bodies results in their being routed back to the citizens' group for revision.

The commissioners also approved the amendments to the election agreement between the county and the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees as requested by the American Arbitration Association.

County Denies Claims, Collects Taxes

The City Council, unanimously rejected the amendments to the bylaws of the Goals and Policies Committee.

County Commissioner Jan Gauger said her objections were "pretty much the same as those of the City Council" but she also had other objections to the proposals.

She said she felt that the bylaws allowed too large an executive committee, and that no consideration was given to the broad representation which is needed in appointing Municipal Employees as requested by the American Arbitration Association.
